

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

SIR JOHN ST. AUBYN, BART.

SIR,

CONVINCED as I am, that it is not in my power to heighten, in the smallest degree, the celebrity of your character, I feel myself, nevertheless, irresistibly impelled to embrace this opportunity of testifying my profound respect for those distinguished virtues, with which it is adorned. And although, Sir, I have not given you the slightest intimation of my design, yet the well-known generosity of your sentiments encourages me to hope that you will pardon my presumption in dedicating the following work to your protection; a work intended to rescue from oblivion the Original Language of a County, which hath long prided itself in the name of St. Aubyn.

To your favour, then, Sir, I beg leave to consign this singular Essay; and professing, at the same time, the utmost veneration for the noble independency of your conduct, and the bright example of your private life, I have the honour to subscribe myself, Sir,

Your most faithful

And most obedient humble servant,

Redruth, May, 1790.

IOWN it may appear unnecessary to the learned at this period to attempt an investigation of the high antiquity of the British language, of which the Cornish is most incontestably a very pure dialect. The subject hath been already successfully treated by many diligent and able writers, to the entire satisfaction of those who delight in researches of this kind.

Yet, it must be acknowledged, that a local inquiry and disquisition into the antiquity of our Cornish-British language has not been so particularly attended to as it deserves. And as the discovery of an original language is the first and leading step to the progressive examination of all other antiquities of a country, it follows of course, that the oldest tongue ought to be studied and understood previously to our entering upon the remains and records of less remote ages.

On this consideration I am inclined to believe, that a work of this tendency will be very acceptable, both to the Antiquarian and the Philologist; especially as I can safely assert, that the old Cornish-British, which is here distinguished very precisely from the modern Cornish dialect, is the most pure and nearest the original of any speech now used in Armorica, or the northern provinces of France, Great Britain, and Ireland.

The Chaldean, Syriac, Egyptian, Arabic, Phenician, Celtic, Gaulish, Welsh, and Cornish languages are all derived from the original Hebrew tongue; and in their descent one from the other, in travelling from the East to the West, have branched themselves into so many different dialects from one and the same root.

The Hebrew and Chaldee are very nearly the same; and the Syriac is next to the latter. The former flourished from the beginning of the world to the Babylonish captivity, 3400 years: But in our Saviour's time, the Jews spoke the Syriac language, and Christ and his Apostles conversed in it.

As from the Hebrews to the Canaanites or Phenicians, so from the Phenicians to the Greeks came letters and arts: And accordingly, from the Phenician character, the Greeks appear to have composed their letters, and the Latins progressively from the Greeks.

So likewise, our ancient and true Cornish appears to be mostly derived from the Greek and old Latin tongues, as it participates much of their cadence and softness, with less of the guttural harshness peculiar to the Hebrew and Chaldee. This is the more easily accounted for, as the Phenicians, about the time of the Trojan war, first discovered the Scilly Islands, and the western shores of Cornwall; with the natives of which they traded for tin, and sold it to the Greeks. The language at that time spoken in other parts of this island, having travelled across a vast continent, was compounded and impure; and therefore we may boldly infer, that the superior purity of the ancient Cornish is chiefly to be ascribed to its genuine introduction from the shores of Greece and Sidon.

It is affirmed by writers, that the inland parts of our island were first planted from the German continent, about eight hundred years after the Flood, and not from the Gauls: And indeed it is very possible that the body of the south-western part of the island was peopled from the Belgic and Gaulish countries both, on account of their propinquity to our opposite coasts and inlets of safety. Nevertheless, our dialect in Cornwall must certainly have obtained that purity, for which it is celebrated, from its immediate introduction by the Phenician navigators; especially as the character and orthography are so greatly softened, and the language is divested of that rough guttural pronunciation, which is retained to

to this time by the Cambro-Britons. In fact, the Cornish and the Armoric dialects are the most nearly allied in character, orthography, and sound, of any two of the British dialects. The Welsh, Irish, and Erse differ from each other greatly; and the two latter differ from the Cornish and Gaulish very much. Indeed the Welsh is closely related to us, and would appear more so, if it were deprived of those numerous combinations of consonants, with which it is, to us, perplexed and entangled.

Hence we may easily account for the similarity existing between the Cornish and Armoric-British; for the coasts of Bretagne, Normandy, and Picardy, are opposite to the shores of Cornwall, Devon, &c. so that the first commercial discoverers of those lands, in their sailing up the British Channel, had equal opportunities of communicating their Grecian and Roman dialects of the Syriac root. This is evidenced by the colloquial resemblance to this day subsisting betwixt the Cornish on the south-western margin of the county, and their opposite neighbours at Morlaix, and other parts of Bas Bretagne, where the low French and the Cornish seem almost one and the same dialect. If I had not been otherwise well apprized of this fact, yet my opinion would have been confirmed by what I have heard from a very old man now living at Moushole near Penzance, who, I believe, is, at this time, the only person capable of holding half an hour's conversation on common subjects in the Cornish tongue. He tells me, that above threescore years ago, being at Morlaix on board a smuggling cutter, and the only time he was ever there, he was ordered on shore with another young man to buy some greens, and not knowing a word of French, as he thought, he was much surprised to find, that he understood a great part of the conversation of some boys at play in the street; and upon further inquiry, he found that he could make known all his wants in Cornish, and be better understood than he could be at home, when he used that dialect. I am well satisfied of the fact, as he is quite an illiterate man, and could have neither the temptation nor the ingenuity to invent a story so useless to himself.

So many centuries having elapsed since the ancient and true dialect hath been spoken, it is now become altogether obsolete, if not totally dead: I have therefore made a distinction between the ancient and modern Cornish in some pieces, such as the Creed, Lord's Prayer, Proper Names of Places, &c. as more notorious and useful for critical inspection: And in the Vocabulary throughout, I have sedulously preferred and extracted from the MSS. which I have collected, all the ancient Cornish I could find in them, divested of Saxon words with Cornish accents and terminations, imposed by oral and illiterate tradition.

The old British language being superseded by the adoption and general cultivation of the Teutonic or Saxon tongue, in process of time became unintelligible and useless in the body and bulk of this island, whence it was driven to the borders and extremities, such as Scotland, Wales, and Cornwall, where it still maintains a reverence and footing among the respective inhabitants, in the dress of differing dialects. Indeed, the veneration in which it is held in Wales is sufficiently shewn by the preservation of it among the natives; many thousands of the peasantry scarcely knowing how to make themselves understood, in the Saxon or English. To such a height of enthusiasm is it revered by many of the inland inhabitants, that they hold all other speech in the utmost contempt; preferring their own predilection with the most stubborn perverseness, and shunning in the most contumacious manner every sort of interloction and communion with any other tongue, till overcome by the pressure of their necessities, and the unavoidable intercourse of mankind in trade and business.

Had the Cornish been equally pertinacious with them, we should not have had reason to lament the loss of our native language for those many ages during which it has been almost sunk

sunk into oblivion among us; but such has been the neglect of our ancestors, and the depredation of time, that our primitive speech was nearly annihilated before the Art of Printing could perpetuate the memory of it to posterity.

So habitually inattentive were they, that many years after the discovery of this Art, they never adverted to the preservation of the MSS. in their language, so that the only MS. extant, was that found in the Cotton Library, now about 800 years old, from which time no other MS. appears, till about the fifteenth century, when we meet with one, which exhibits three Ordinalia or Interludes taken from Holy Writ; 1. De origine mundi; 2. Of the passion of our Lord; 3. Of the Resurrection. The originals of these are all in the Bodleian Library; as likewise one Ordinale, Of the creation of the world and the deluge, by William Jordan, of Hellaston, anno 1611. The 5th and last book is a poem, entitled Mount Calvary, On the passion and resurrection of our Lord and Saviour. This MS. written on vellum, was given by Mr. Anstis, Garter King at Arms, to Mr. Lhuyd; but when or by what author it was written is wholly uncertain; though this copy, by the hand writing, may also be attributed to the fifteenth century.

The late Rev. Dr. William Borlase, my learned friend and relation, received a copy of this poem (which is the best of the whole in the Cornish tongue) from the Rev. Dr. Lyttleton, Dean of Exeter, afterwards Bishop of Carlisle; which was written under the direction of Mr. Scawen, of Molinick, who says, "That he had long had a proposal and a desire for the recovery of our primitive tongue; and that at the last assizes, 1678, that he was able to be at in Lancelston to perform his duty to his King and country, there in the Judges' chambers happened some speech to be of things memorable in Cornwall, and particularly concerning the ancient Cornish tongue; for the loss or decay whereof Sir Francis North, then Lord Chief Justice, afterwards Lord Keeper, seemed to be concerned; blaming us all then present: Enquiring also whether there were any thing written in it now remaining. I told his Lordship, I had an old Cornish piece long in my keeping; viz. The passion of Christ described in Cornish heroic metre. His Lordship was earnest for a sight of it. This, spoken by such a person, a stranger to our country, (and I having thereupon promised it to him, at his next coming in circuit) it put me into more serious thoughts concerning it than formerly.

"Accordingly I prepared it with some additions thereon, as well as I could, (without help of fit books, and men living, and good associates by me) but then by reason of grievous infirmities grown upon me, in the mean time, expressed by syncopes and other distempers, I was not able to present it to his Lordship as I intended; together with the discourse which takes it rise from the aforementioned conference in 1678, since which time it hath layen upon my hands.

"I do not know any Cornish writing else extant, and this hath been a long time reserved by me as a precious reliq.* How ancient it is may be in part guessed at, but not clearly made out by demonstration. But as to the speech itself preserved in this writing, it is such as the common speakers of the Cornish now used here, and in Wales, and Armorica do not understand it; nor any but such as will be studious in it: No more, than the common speakers of the vulgar tongue of the Greeks do at this day Homer's Iliads. Words of one another, 'tis true, all those three sorts of people do understand alternately; not all, but mostly such as are radical. Colloquies of one another they do not enjoy, nor distinguish the several dialects; and least of all do our common speakers understand this MS. but such of them as, upon study, come to the knowledge of it, commend the elegance thereof extremely.

* By this it appears, that Mr. Scawen had never seen the plays before mentioned.

THE EDITOR'S PREFACE.

“ If I should say, that these endeavours of mine, would be totally useful and successful to the recovery of the speech, as ill qualified as I am, I know well it must be thought more vain and censurable in me, now at 84, than it was in Tully to attempt the Greek tongue at 60 years. For me it will suffice me, if I do but, hoc digito monstrare viam.” — Unfortunately this was the case; for in the same year, that worthy old gentleman departed this life, and left his papers on our subject in a very disordered condition, together with several others on Stannary business, he being also Vice-Warden of the Stannaries many years before his death.

Here a pause succeeds to any further inquiries into our subject for more than twenty years; when Mr. Lhuyd coming into Cornwall professedly on this business, it made Mr. Tonkin, Mr. Keigwin, Mr. Gwavas, and several other Cornish gentlemen, very solicitous to promote his success, by all the assistance in their power, which was not inconsiderable, as from a strong prepossession in favour of their native language, they were exceedingly zealous in the cause, and diligent in their endeavours to restore this object of their veneration to its former honours. Accordingly we find in the correspondence of Mr. Lhuyd and Mr. Tonkin, about the commencement of the present century, that Mr. Lhuyd had gone great lengths towards the formation of a Cornish-British Vocabulary, as he says at the end of his Cornish Grammar, p. 253.—That looking over the sheets of his said Grammar he must recall the promise made in his preface, p. 222, of a Cornish-English Vocabulary, there being no room for it in that Volume of Glossography, and therefore must defer it 'till the next. Mr. Lhuyd's death about the year 1709 frustrated his good intention, which must have been the greatest loss to this pursuit that it ever had, or ever will meet with, on account of his profound learning and singular attachment to the recovery of our primitive language. In his hands, particularly fitted as he was for the undertaking, and supplied with every essential article of erudition from surrounding libraries, not only the recovery of this dialect would have been effected, but it would have been adorned with every elegance and improvement, from the unceasing labours of such a consummate Philologist.—

Soon after the death of Mr. Lhuyd, all his MS. collections were surrendered to the custody of Sir Thomas Sebright, who died in 1736. His heir being a minor of tender years, and the trustees unmindful of such things as were not obviously and immediately connected with the benefit of their charge, those collections were eventually buried, and lost to all future public inspection.

Here I should observe also that about the 15th year of this century, the public expectation was turned towards Mr. Hals, of Fenton Gymps, who professed a warm affection for the dialect of his country and took uncommon pains to heap together a mass of words which he entitled Lhadymer ay Kernow, or the Cornish Interpreter; which I discovered, some years since, by certain notices found among Mr. Tonkin's writings, to be in the custody of the Rev. Henry Hawkins Tremayne. Mr. Tremayne, on my application, found the MS. and lent it to me for a considerable time.

Mr. Hals's Lhadymer is a most strange hodge-podge of Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and British words, confusedly heaped together, and in such a manner as not only to shew his want of method, but also to expose his great deficiency in those learned languages, which he lugged in to support and illustrate his etymology; it being common with him to write Tempore regnum Augustus; ostium fluvius, &c. Indeed all his knowledge of those languages appears to have been derived from some books, with which he was furnished by his first wife, the widow of one Code, a schoolmaster of St. Wenn. However, as this farrago contained some intelligence intelligence not unworthy my notice, I took particular care to select all that was valuable and proper for my purpose.

About the time of Mr. Lhuyd's demise, Messrs. Tonkin, Keigwin, and Gwavas, with other associates, kept up a correspondence in their native tongue, as well as they could, by collecting all the mottoes, proverbs, and idioms, on which they could lay their hands.

In this collection Mr. Tonkin took the lead, being determined to publish a Cornish Word-Book in his then proposed History and Antiquities of Cornwall illustrated, in three volumes quarto. But being a person of a desultory turn, and meeting with many vexations and difficulties in the world, he died before he had completed the work. He left, indeed, a large mass of MS. books, but they were thrown together without any sort of order or connection. Had this gentleman been as happy and steady in his disposition, as he was distinguished by his learning and genius, his abilities would have ensured applause far superior to the coldness of simple approbation.

Mr. Tonkin was assisted in his undertaking by the critical knowledge and industry of William Gwavas, Esq. who was indefatigable in collecting and ascertaining words for his use and arrangement. Mr. Martin Keigwin likewise, and his son Mr. John Keigwin, both inhabitants of the little fishing village of Moushole, and who had sucked in the broken dialect with their milk, were ready upon all occasions to clear up any doubts that might arise, and were generally fortunate in removing those difficulties, which embarrassed the other Gentlemen.

The result of this coalition was an alphabetical arrangement of words; not however in the manner of the Vocabulary found in the Cotton Library, which is exceedingly devious and irregular, being written throughout in continued lines, without any respect to order and verbal distribution.—In consequence of the death of Mr. Tonkin, this collection must have lain some time subject to the caprice of his descendants, who were illiterate women, and was therefore liable to much loss and mutilation, till it was taken into the protection of the late Robert Hoblyn, of Nanswhidden, Esq. in whose celebrated library it met with a safe asylum.—It was afterwards taken thence, and committed to my trust by favour of the late John Quicke, Esq. who married the relict of Mr. Hoblyn, and who, with reiterated expressions of his wish to see it warmed into life, consigned it to my care for correction, additions, and publication; to which end I pledged my diligence and application, with whatever assistance I could procure from the MSS. before mentioned, together with some detached papers from Mrs. Veal, the daughter of Mr. Gwavas; from Mrs. Mary Ustick, the widow of the Rev Henry Ustick, of Breage; and from the papers of Mr. John Bosons, of Newlyn. I also applied to Miss Foss, the representative of her grandfather Thomas Tonkin, Esq. for the use of his other MSS. to which I had access, and from which I extracted all that I could find valuable in that rich mass of indigested materials.

The manuscript ground-work of my undertaking being thus acknowledged, I must also confess my implicit submission to the works of Mr. Lhuyd, and of the late Dr. Wm. Borlase, who, in the interval betwixt the death of Mr. Tonkin, and his papers being delivered into my custody, published at the end of his Antiquities of Cornwall an epitomised Vocabulary, which has furnished a few useful additions to my larger collection. It is likewise with singular satisfaction that I acknowledge my obligations to the Rev. Mr. Whitaker, of Ruan Lanyhorn, for his communications, and his criticisms on the British language; a Gentleman, whose warm defence of our ancient tongue deserves the grateful applause of his country.

After much consideration how to render my performance so full and complete as to engage the approbation of the publick, and as the curious nature of the undertaking demands, I determined

determined to make it a digest of the Cornish-British language, by introducing in the First Part the marrow of Mr. Lhuyd's Grammar, with some additions, in which are incorporated his instructions for the reading of old British MSS. — I hope this very learned Introduction to Philology, which I have reprinted at the entrance of my book, will not be found out of its place. — The Second Part contains my Vocabulary, consisting of several thousand words, collected and arranged from the materials already mentioned. This hath employed the labour of many years; and, perhaps, a work of a drier kind hath seldom been undertaken by any harmless drudge whomsoever.* As the whole of the Cotton Vocabulary is inserted, I have taken care to note each word from that ancient remain, with this mark †. — The Third and last Part, consists of the Cornish Proper Names of Hundreds, Parishes, Villages, &c. with their distinctions of the old and modern Cornish set forth in the concise manner I could adopt, so that the reader may, at a single glance, apprehend the difference. This is followed by the Creed, Pater Noster, and Decalogue in both Ancient and Modern Cornish; and also Mottoes, Proverbs, and Sayings in the Vulgar Cornish; with the last correspondence between Mr. Lhuyd and Mr. Tonkin.

I wish, indeed, it had been within the compass of my knowledge, to have rendered the Vocabulary perfect and complete; but the scanty and limited materials I had to consult rendered every hope of that kind abortive: For, according to the best information I have been able to procure, there are no other Cornish MSS. to be met with any where, beside those I have already mentioned; from which I have extracted those words in the Vocabulary, which are to be found in them, illustrated by numerous quotations from them, which are familiar to the language of scripture and the popular idiom.

As for the vulgar Cornish now spoken, it is so confined to the extreme corner of the county, and those ancient persons who still pretend to jabber it, are even there so few; the speech itself is so corrupted; and the people too, for the most part, are so illiterate; that I cannot but wonder at my patience, and assume some merit to myself, for my singular industry, in collecting the words which I have accumulated from oral intelligence; especially, as hardly any of the persons, whom I have consulted, could give a tolerable account of the orthography, much less of the etymology, or derivation of those words, which they use; for they often join, or rather run, two or three words together, making but one of them all; though their pronunciation is generally correct: — As, for instance, “Meraſtaðu,” which they pronounce in one breath, as if it were a single word: Whereas it is a contraction of four, “Meor ’ras tha Dew,” Many thanks to God; anciently written, “Maur gras tha Deu.” And, “Meraſtawhy,” Many thanks to you; a contraction of “Maur ’ras tha why.”

* See Dr. Johnson on the word Lexicographer.

COURTEOUS AND NOBLE INHABITANTS

Of the COUNTY of CORNWALL,

HONOUR, HEALTH, AND HAPPINESS EVERLASTING.

I Know very well (learned Gentlemen) that it is much a debt upon me, to make to you, in the first place, some apology or excuse, for taking upon me to write and publish a Cornish Grammar, and Vocabulary, when I was neither born in the county of Cornwall, nor yet sojourned in that country more than four months.—The truth is this, I was bound, according to the commands of some Lords and Gentlemen of Wales, and some others all over this kingdom, to write, so as I could, on the British Tongue (or oldest Language of this Island) something more than had been written before, by the much-knowing and much-learned Master Doctor Davis, and some others, on the Welsh-British. And therefore this charge is fallen upon me (would I—or would I not) to give the best information that I can to those that are studious in this Ancient Tongue, about the other British Dialects, viz. the Cornish, the Armorick (or as it is called with us in Wales, the Sezauick) and the Caledonian, or Scotch-British, which is spoken in the Highlands of Albany, and the kingdom of Ireland; where are still preserved (as every one studious in these Ancient Tongues may see in this book) many hundreds of words at the least, which in their true nature or language, were taken from the British Tongue. Now whereas there is not one single Grammar, or yet a Vocabulary for this Tongue (except some small Armorick and French books) published, I found myself bound to write you a sort of Grammar, for your Tongue. I know very well, that the inhabitants could have performed this work much better, than is done by me. But yet I considered that it was better to give some sort of help, than no help at all; and likewise that this poor work of mine, might induce another to begin a good one. And I have too some hopes that the noble readers, and good judges, will forgive the faults to a stranger of a far country, which if there were a Vocabulary, written before, would not be printed in this paper; and where we speak but never so little about the Tongues aforesaid, in this book, or before these Grammars and Vocabularies of mine should come to be printed, as they are used abroad; so I did (with the necessary turnings) come to print and publish the Armorick, or French-British Grammar, and Vocabulary.

But

A PREFATORY DISCOURSE.

But yet (on the other side) as I would not for any thing, take upon me to perform any one thing soever that is above my power, so I take leave here to tell the Reader, that, what can be given, I have recovered by some diligence about the Cornish Language, by the help of the Welsh Tongue; and whatsoever thing I cannot draw from thence, I leap over. The way that I took to get some knowledge of the Cornish Language, was, partly by writing some down from the mouths of the people in the West of Cornwall, in particular in the parish of St. Just; and partly, by the like help of some Gentlemen, who wrote out for me many Cornish words: in particular, Mr. John Keigwyn of the lower house in Mousehole, Mr. Eustick in the aforesaid parish of St. Just, Mr. James Jenkyns of Alverton,† by Penzance, and Mr. Nicholas Boson of Newlyn in the parish of Paul. But I got the best part of my learning from three Manuscript Cornish books, put into my hands by the most Reverend and most worshipful Father in God Sir Jonatban Trelawney, Bishop of Exeter; and that most knowing and most learned gentleman, John Anstis, Esq. one of the senators of the county of Cornwall, in London; and the aforesaid Mr. Keigwyn, who, by the request of the before named Bishop, translated the said books into English; and is without any comparison, the most skilfull judge of our age in the Cornish Language. Besides the three Manuscript books above, Mr. Anstis found a British Vocabulary, hand-written many ages since, in the Cotton Library in London, and, (a) as he did always, so according to his good will on the like occasions before and after, he wrote to me about it, When I had looked over the book, I perceived very well that it was not a Welsh Vocabulary, according to the Latin name (written at the latter end) Vocabularium Wallicum; but a Cornish Vocabulary, as the thing (according to my thought) must appear to every British reader, that shall consider upon the translations of these Latin words, viz. Angelus, Ail; Stella, Steren; Membrum, Ezel; Supercilium, Abranz; Column, Conna; Palatum, Stefenic; Mentum, Elget; Tibia, Elesker; Vitricus, Altro; Regina, Ruivanes; Vulgus, Pobel biogo; Puer, Flob; Senex, Cotb; Mercator, Guicour; Prora, Flurrog; Umbra, Scod; Milvus, Scoul; Bufo, Croinoc; Rana, Guilfchin; Passer, Golvan; Pullus, Ydbnunc; Scomber, Brelhyl; Lucius, Denshoc dour; Vulpes, Louuern; Ursus, Ors; Scrofa, Guis; Echinus, Sorb; and many other words, which are not known among us Welshmen. I know full well that, I could produce one, and that with more true likeness, than can the small Vocabulary of the British Armorick, or British of the country of Lezou in France, be; for that dialect is near thereunto; and in truth there are many words of them to this day still spoken by the people of Lezou, although they are not used now in the county of Cornwall. But this wrong-thinking is put away, without much trouble, when we discover that the author of this Vocabulary, when he was in want for British words, did write down Old English words for the same, by giving them sometimes a Cornish termination; and did not bring any of the words from the French, as he would without doubt, if he had been an Aarmorick Briton. Now these these, and the like, are the words thereof, taken out of the Old English; Comes, Turl; Lector, Redior; Hamus, Hye; Fiald, Harfel; Saltator, Lappier; Sartor, Seuyad; Contentiosus, Strivor; Spinther, Broach; Fibula, Streing; Raptor, Robbior; Noctua, Hule; Halec, Herring; Prahun, Bidin; Lagena, Kanna; Trutta, Trud. Now as it could not be any Armorick Briton, that wrote this Vocabulary, so neither could it be written by any Welshman. For had he been a Welshman, he would, without farther consideration, have written, Darlbenydd, Breyr, Hox, Telyn, (or Krúth) Neidiur, Guniadydb, Kynbenny's, Guaeg, Aruestr, Yspeiliur, Pylbyan, Pennog, Guerlodb, Ystén (or Kynnog Pifer, or Kofbrelb) and Brethbylb. In like manner, if it had been done by an Armorick Briton, he would never have named the things called in Latin, Quercus, Rhamnus, Melis, Lepus, Hoedus; Glaстанen, Eithinen, Brox, Scouarnog, Min: but instead thereof, Guazen daro, Lân, Lus, Gat, and Gavar bian. I have marked the words taken out of this Old Vocabulary thus [†] and this is also put in the like manner, before some other old words drawn from a large old Latin book, written no doubt by some Briton; but of what country or kingdom I know not.

A PREFATORY DISCOURSE.

But Doctor Davies (according to my thought) has named this Cornish Vocabulary in the Cotton Library, Liber Landavensis: for there are many words, in this Welsh Vocabulary, marked, Lib. Land. which I never saw in another book. But yet, as he had seen the book which is now in the Cotton Library, I wonder that he would not draw all the words from that to his own book. Nevertheless the truth is, I know very well that the words therein marked Lib. Land. are not written in the book called Liber Landavensis; for I have looked over that before written book, in the Library of that most learned and most knowing gentleman, the Lord of Lammer in the country of Guenez, i. e. North Wales, and likewise a fair transcript in the Library of Jesús College, in Oxford.

There is some hope in me, that the Reader will forgive me, that I do not always write after the language of our time, nor yet keep to the writing retained in this Cornish Vocabulary. By perusing the aforesaid written books, I have discovered that there have happened four noted changes (or variations) and remember very much, in the Cornish tongue, within this age, or these last hundred years: and the same being before very little printed in the Latin and Celtick Vocabulary before set forth, I was very desirous to give them in the Cornish-English Vocabulary by hand here to you. The first change is, to put the letter b, before the letter m, and to speak and write Fybm, Fabm, Kabm, Gybman, Krobman, and Kylobman, &c. in the place of Fym, Fm, Kam, Gymbman, Kromman, and Kylomman. The second is, to put the letter d, before the letter n; and to speak thus, in the place of Pen, Pan, Pren; Guyn, Guau, Bron, Brynan: Pedn, Padn, Predn, Guydn, Guadn, Brodn, Brydnan. Neither did I see fit to give a place to these changes in this Vocabulary; for neither will they hereafter retain these changes; and likewise their language is thence more hard and rugged, than it was before: and for that many times you must turn the m and n to b and d, by saying: tubbi, obba, bodda, bedda, where you said before tubmi, obma, bodna, and bedna. And this second novelty hath cast off these words so far from the former words tunumi, omna, bonna, and benna,—that not any can at all, neither Armorick Briton, nor yet Welshman, find out their foundation, by seeing from what place they are come.

The third change is, to put the letter d before s, (the which s is almost always pronounced as z) and to speak the s as sb, for I have found out in one of the afore-said written books, which is a book setting forth miracles out of the holy Scripture, written, more or less, one hundred and fifty years since, where are these words just as you now speak them, Kridzbi, Pidzbi, Bobodzbo, Pedzbar, Bledzban, Lagadzbo, &c. instead of these, Cresy, Pesy, Bobofoc, Peswar, Lagaz, (a). I know very well that you do not write these words as I write them, with dz, but only with the single letter g, or with an i consonant; but this falls in with the manner of the English writing: and since the speaking is from thence, the writing must be put and likewise changed from z, [or s] as was the s before from d or t.

The fourth change is turned very much like the third; and that is, to put sb after t, or (according to the Armorick writing) of late, the letter t, for cb: and so, to change the words Ty (or Tey) to Tsbei; Ti to Tbi (or Cbee) Pysgetta to Pysgettsa, and many more the like. From whence the other speakings, in which you go off very far from us Welshmen, viz. in speaking a for e; e for o and y; i for e; o for a; and v consonant for f; and likewise b for x; th, s, or b, for t and d; and l, for lb; nor will I for any thing take upon me these novelties: in part, for that the speaking from thence is easy enough; and in part, for that few of them are so old (if any of them are very old) as our language, and the language of the people of Lezou. And another is, in naming of late the letter t, for s; which is not so hugely old, yet may be old enough for the good taking, and keeping it hereafter.

But now the Reader will ask me without doubt, why I have in this writing, preserved the afore-said alterations myself, since I knew the deficiencies of them? my answer is, that it was my great desire that they might be taken aright; and that every one might know to speak Cornish (or understand further) according to this letter. But my hope is, that you will not in such a manner suffer any other defects in your future Cornish printings, as you have hitherto done in the fore-written alterations.—Neither can any one make many novelties in any tongue soever at one time. It is an early work, and therefore too short a licence to take any one thing, before that it be born and bred in the country, to offer it.

A PREFATORY DISCOURSE.

When any one is willing to know the more late Cornish alterations, that he may the better find them out, let him compare the Cornish words with the like Welsh words of the country of Guenek (or which is much nearer) and the Armorick words; and when you see the agreement, or concord, about the consonant letters of these two tongues, then you may see whether the Cornish hath kept to these consonants, or not: if not, you may without any doubt, know, that the Cornish words are changed. For example; when you see that we turn the English words, to laugh, to play, to whistle; bitter, six, sister, in the language of Guenek, xueribin, xuare, xuibiany, xueru, xuex, xuær; and in the Cornish, xoasin, xoari, xuibanat; xuero, xuex, xoar; but in the Cornish, buertbin, guare, buibanat; buero, but, bôr; we know then very easily, that the Cornish is changed. For the like passages are never thus turned by the people of the Welsh Guenez (b); and the people of Lezou have learned to turn from them.

For the greatest part 'tis very clear from this book, that the Cornish British is much nearer to the dialect of the people of Lezou, than to that of the Welsh. Neither is there any great wonder in it; since we find that the Britons of Lezou returned into this island under Prince Ivor, the son of Alan the second, King of Lezou, and Tnir his cousin-german (when Cadwallader the last British King did go from this island to Rome) and recovered Cornwall and Devon, and other countries in the west of this kingdom, about the year 600 (c) and they kept Exeter till the year 936, when Atbelstan, King of the Saxons, drove those Britons over the river Tamar. (d)

So that from this time we find the county of Cornwall inhabited by Britons, partly Armoricans, which she had lost about the year 384, under the command of Conan Meridock, and partly of islands lost in the time of Cadwalladar, but carried home by the before mentioned Ivor and Tnir.

What number of Britons are now here in Cornwall no man knows; for that there are no books (according to my knowledge) neither in Cornish, nor yet in English, old and of authority sufficient for the discovery of this thing. I know very well there are some old writers, or antiquaries, who think there are not many (if there be any) of the Cornish gentlemen of our age descended from the Britons.

For my own part I cannot believe that it is a thing of much value from what people a gentleman is descended; for I consider,

That learning, which good lives do grace,
Is better than the noblest race.

(b) There is another Guenek in Lezou. (c) Carad. Langarb. in Hist. Prince, Wallis, p. 13, Ed. Lond. Ann. 1697.

(d) Ibid. p. 48.

A PREFATORY DISCOURSE.

And therefore I would never contend, whether a gentleman may better be said to be a Saxon, a Dane, or a Norman, than to be a Briton. But if one generation be more honourable than another, wherefore should it be less esteemed, at least by the people inhabiting this island, to be many ages since descended from such a Roman, under Julius Cæsar? And (though I have not yet seen any old writings, concerning those two counties) yet I make no great doubt, but that there are thousands in Cornwall, and many in Devon, descended from the first inhabitants of the west parts of this kingdom.

Neither do I put much weight (though this be a very true rule in Wales) on the British names of the Cornish gentlemen, taken from their seats; for I know very well that part of them are new named, according to the names of their places: and therefore, where old writings are wanting, it is not very clear from whence the people are descended. But on the other side, I know that it is not very secure to believe that they ought to be ascribed Saxons; for it is the greatest honour among the Saxons to be descended from the Normans; and therefore to ascribe and write, many times may be false, that such are Old Saxons, Danes, and Britons.

I know well enough that there are many people (very learned and very knowing in other things) who accuse and condemn any solicitude about keeping up these old languages. For my part, I am not very solicitous about keeping up the Cornish language, since it is not very necessary to the people who know very well how to speak English, or the Tongue which is most used, and therefore the most necessary now in our kingdom: many Welsh gentlemen understand both: we see some among us in great want of the English, &c. we will not learn, we British, the Cornish ourselves. But yet this thing must be pleasing to you, for I will not take upon me to judge of it. But to preserve something of an Old Tongue in some printed book, is without doubt a thing very pleasing to Scholars and Gentlemen; and very necessary to our Antiquaries. And therefore ought it not to be considered by our aforesaid people, before they condemn any science, and see that this solicitude is an obligation, and engagement to the Criticks, and Antiquaries? and particularly, why should not such a book as this (though it be but half done) be very pleasing, as well as the best English Antiquaries; Leland, Camden, and Sir H. Spelman? Therefore since the preserving the Old Cornish Tongue in some printed book, is a thing very necessary to the Antiquaries, and pleasing to the learned Lords and Gentlemen; there is some hope to me; not only in this, that some of you Gentlemen yourselves, will take to learn and write it; but likewise, that you will with a good will, accept this little work half done from,

Your humblest, and most ready, work-servant,

E. L H U Y D.

CORNISH GRAMMAR.

CHAP. I.

OF THE LETTERS.

THERE being nothing printed in the CORNISH LANGUAGE, and not above three or four books (that we know of) extant in writing, I presume the introducing of the General Alphabet, so far as it is used in the Cornish pronunciation, can be of no inconveniency at present, and may prove useful hereafter. The Cornish Alphabet I therefore make use of is as follows :

LETTERS.	PRONUNCIATION.
A, a.	A.
V, v, e.	A in all, small, &c.
B, b.	B.
X, x.	X in Greek.
D, d.	D.
Dd, dh.	Tb in This, That, &c.
E, e.	E.
F, f.	F.
G, g, ȝ.	G, as in Go, ȝet, &c.
Ȝ.	Ng, as in the word King.
H, h.	H.
I, i.	Ee.
K, k.	K.
L, l.	L.

M, m.	M.
N, n.	N.
O, o.	O.
P, p.	P.
R, r.	R.
S, s.	S.
Sh, sh.	Sb.
T, t.	T.

The vowels marked thus [â] are always long, and those thus [à] short.— This latter may also be used instead of doubling the consonant immediately following; as, tebyaz for tebbiaz, &c.----

* Prefixed to any word, shews that it is now obsolete, or not generally used; but occurs in MSS.

The ancient Cornish letters, as appears by some few inscriptions yet remaining, were (besides the old Roman) the same with those used by other Britons and Scots; which, being also used by the ancient English, are now best known by the name of SAXON LETTERS. These they have all along changed according to the alterations in the English, in so much that those few who would write any Cornish at present, write it after the English orthography. But that the curious may be a little assisted in reading the most ancient British manuscripts, whether Welsh, Cornish or Cumbrian, (if any should be extant) I shall here give some account of our old orthography; — by comparing the various acceptations of Letters, as formerly used in reference to our present reading of the same words with the foregoing Alphabet.

DIRECTIONS FOR READING OLD BRITISH MANUSCRIPTS.

IT has not been my fortune to meet with very ancient manuscripts in the British Language; though I have seen old copies of the works of some poets of the sixth century, and some few later transcripts of others pretended to be much older.---The best collections of this kind, extant at present, belong to the family of Hengurt, in the county of Meirionydh, and to the Worshipful sir William Williams, of Lhanvorda, in Shropshire.

The former of these, collected in the reign of King Charles I. by that learned and candid antiquary Robert Vaughan, of Hengurt, esq; consists of about seventy old manuscripts on parchment, and a considerable number of others on paper; a great part whereof are fairly transcribed by his own hand, and by John Jones, esq; of Gelhy - Lŷdvy in Flintshire, a gentleman of the same laudable curiosity, and his constant correspondent. These two antiquaries, being the greatest collectors of their time, made a mutual contract, that their manuscripts should descend to the survivor; by which means Mr. Vaughan had Mr. Jones's labours added to his own.

The Lhanvorda collection consists also of some vellum manuscripts; but chiefly of late transcripts, which are considerable for number, and the best methodized of any. These were collected by a neighbouring gentleman, Mr. William Maurice, of Keven y brayx, an ingenious antiquary, and a person no less curious and indefatigable than the two former.

I have been admitted to a transient view (for a few hours) of these collections; and the oldest Welsh manuscript I saw at Hengurt is y Lhŷvyr dŷ o Gaer Vŷrdhyn, or, The Black Book of Carmarthen.

then. It is a Quarto of fifty-four leaves; containing poems of the 6th century, by Myrdhyn Wylht, Talieſin, Lhyſarx hên, & Kŷſogio Elaeth. The former part of this book is in a large fair character, and ſeems conſiderably older than the latter; and the latter might poſſibly have been tranſcribed by that noted bard Kŷndhelu Brŷdydh maur, or at leaſt in his time, which was about the year 1160. I am ſenſible Doctör Davies places this poet ninety years later: but in this MS. fol. 52, I find he writes an Elegy on the death of Madog 'ab Meredydh, prince of Powys, which was in the year 1158.

T. Williams, author of the Latin-Welſh Dictionary, published by Dr. Davies, tells us, that in the year 1594 he ſaw a book of St. Beyno's, at Kŷlŷnog church in Carnarvonſhire, which (as was I preſume therein mentioned) had been written by Turrog, who, living in the time of Kadvan, prince of N. Wales, muſt have been cotemporary with Auſtin the monk (b). But ſince he gives us no account of its contents, nor tells us whether it was Welſh or Latin, I ſhall be apt to ſuppoſe it the latter.----This book, whatever it contained, is now loſt; as is alſo a Chronicle written by Turrog's cotemporary, Tŷſilio the ſon of Bruſſuel Yſgŷthrog, prince of Powys, which I find inſerted in H. Salbury's manuſcript catalogue of Welſh writers, and was extant, as I have been credibly informed, within theſe fifty years.

Seeing therefore we find valuable antiquities loſt in an age that was curious,

(b) Vid. Davis. Diſt. Britannico-Lat. in voce Tiboeth.

we can make no manner of eſtimate at the number of MSS. loſt the foregoing centuries, when ſuch ancient writings were called by the incurious monks Vetuſta & inutilia (c), and when our anceſtors, the Provincial Britons, were perpetually either engaged in war among themſelves, or expoſed to the invaſion of foreigners; the Picts, Scots, Saxons, Danes, and Normans.

However, though I have not been ſo ſucceſſful, as to meet with any older manuſcript in the Britiſh language, than the fore-mentioned Black Book of Carmarthen, ſome very ancient Latin MSS. have yet occurred, written by Britons; and theſe have, here and there, ſome Latin words gloſs'd with Britiſh interpretations, or elſe ſome Britiſh words in the margin.

The firſt of theſe is the Landaf Goſpel, now called St. Chad's Book, at Litchfield. ---- This MS. may poſſibly be eleven hundred years ſtanding. It has (beſides ſome later Saxon) a few ancient memorials of donations to the Church of Landaf, entered here and there in the margin, which are partly Latin and partly Britiſh; and are of about nine hundred years ſtanding.--Theſe have been lately mangled by the book-binder; but the accurate and ingenious Mr. Wanley has preſerved what remains of them in his late catalogue of Saxon manuſcripts.

The ſecond (to retain its own title) is inſcribed, Ovidii Naſonis Artis Amatorie, Lib. Rrimus, and is probably, though it be the small British character, as old as the first. This old Fragment is bound with various others, and is preserved in the Bodley Library, NE. D. 2. 19. All the words superscribed, (which may be understood of the other ancient Latin manuscripts written by the Britons) are not British, but sometimes other Latin words for better explanation.

A third is a tract of Eutex (for so the transcriber's preface directs me to call him) the Grammarian's De discernendis conjugationibus, gloss'd with British, after the same manner, and in much the same hand.

A fourth consists of some Notes, by one Ninianus a Briton, de pondēpibur et menjurip.

A fifth is Juvencus's Poem: Juveni Presbyteri Paraphrasis in Evangelia, and is preserved in the Publick Library in Cambridge.

The sixth, and as I presume the latest, (though being a foreign MS. I cannot so well judge of its time) contains some instructions for speaking the Latin, and has its British interpretations more frequent than others (d).

Of these ancient manuscripts:---The first, as is manifest, came out of South Wales. The second and third seem to have been the old Loegrian British, in some measure yet retained in Cornwall; which I gather, partly from the ele-gancy of the hand, and partly from some terms; as, mophaup, many, much; caiauc, a book (probably from the Latin codice) guapim, a play; guapdi, a scene, &c. not to insist upon the plural termination of nouns in ou; as, lomou, busbes; puniou, fillets; which was constant amongst the Cornish as well as the Armoric Britons, and never used (that we know of) in Wales.

I take Ninian, from the resemblance of the hand to the Scottish, [or Irish] to have been a Cumbrian Briton; but dare not suppose this fragment so old as St. Ninian, the apostle of the Southern Picts, of whom Bede saith,—Australes Picti qui inter eosdem montes habent sedes, multo ante tempore [scil. ante Columbam Pictorum Septentrionalium Apostolum] relieto errore Idolatriæ, fidem veritatis acceperant, prædicante eis verbum, Niniano, Episcopo Reverendissimo & Sanctissimo viro de Natione Britonum, qui erat Romæ regulariter Fidem & Mysteria veritatis edoctus. Cujus sedem Episcopatus Sancti Martini nomine & Ecclesiam insignem, ubi ipse etiam corpore und cum pluribus Sanctis requiescit: Jam nunc Anglorum Gens obtinet, qui locus ad Provinciam Berniciorum pertinens, vulgò vocatur Ad candidam casam.

The Cambridge Juvencus is also undoubtedly either a Cumbrian or a Pictish MS. for the hand is perfectly Scottish; and I am well assured no Briton, but either a Cumbrian or a Pict, would ever have rendered the word Canus, as we there find it, Cenithliath; which is at this day, with a small variation of orthography, [viz. Cunliath] Caledonian

(or

(or Albanian) British, and (from thence) Irish. Any other Briton would have written Pénluſt, or somewhat like it. I am sensible from the name [Price] in a modern hand before it, the book came but lately out of Wales to Cambridge. But it was certainly brought to Wales out of the North, as were doubtless a great many other books, (though few, if any else, are now extant) when a colony of Northern Britons settled there about the year 883 (e).

The sixth is, in all appearance, from the hand, and some passages in it, Armoric: which seems also confirmed by the Author's proposing a journey to Tours, the metropolis anciently of the Armoric Britons, whence Wil. Brito L. 3. Philipp.

Inde iter accelerat Turonis festinus ad urbem,
Quam geminum nitidâ flumen circumfluit unda,
Hinc Liger hinc Carus. —
Quæ cum sit Britonum caput et Metropolis, una Bis fenas sub se cathedras lætatur habere.

From these very ancient manuscripts, and others of later centuries, I take the following notes on our old and late British orthography.

A.

A (excepting in diphthongs) is to be pronounced as in English in the word man, &c. The pronunciation it has in the words fall, ſhall, and the like, is never used in the Welsh. The Cornish indeed at present use it in some words, but they express it with an o, writing bôz, to be; mâz, to go, &c. as we often find it in the English; as, bolly, bops, boneſt. I have expressed it in this Cornish Alphabet by an a reversed [v], because each pronunciation ought to have distinct characters.

A long was sometimes expressed in the Cornish by doubling the letter; as, paal, a ſpade.

A seems to have been sometimes pronounced as E, for (besides some other instances) on a broken monument erected about the year 830, by Concenn [al. Kyſen, or Kynan] prince of Pouys, to be seen yet near the abbey of Lhan Gollen in Denbighshire, I find the country of Powys written Regiorem Pouoir.

Au in the final syllable is to be read as o: so madauc, mapchauc, junguebaul, budicaul, must be read, madog, varzog, rhinedhol, býdhygol.

Ai is sometimes pronounced as e. Ex. gr. Puber, cartoir. Ovid. Art. am.

Ai was anciently written where we now use ae. For in all old copies of Ninius we never find Caep, a city, but Caip, or Kaip.

B.

B in old manuscripts has two pronunciations; for besides the common, it must be sometimes read as v consonant; as, gilbin, a beak or bill; morbpan, a cor-morant; anbodlaun, unwilling, &c. must be be read, gulvin, morvran, and anvodlon, or (as formerly) anvodhlon, which in S. Wales is now pronounced anvallon.

C.

C, excepting in some few late Cornish words, as, chacyes, purfued; cyte, a city; cendel, fine linen, &c. had never the pronunciation of c as always in the English, (and in our English pronunciation of the Latin) before e and i.—So the common pronunciation of this letter is as K: but in old manuscripts the final, and also very often a middle c, must be read as g. For trucaurac, merciful; gureffauc, bot; lritauc, angry; ac, and; pac, for; Saer-nec, English; and Guyblec, Irish; must be read, trigarog, gureffog, lhidiog, ag, rhag, Saefneg, Ghuydeleg. So in Cornish, gurek a wife, is pronounced gureg.

C as χ. In the oldest manuscripts the letter C must be sometimes pronounced as ch or χ. As, Ni canam for Ni chanav, Ni guoncoram for Ni uorχysav, &c.

Ch was used in the oldest British manuscripts, and at all times by the Welsh, as at present; viz. as χ or gb according to the roughest palatal, or as some call it, guttural pronunciation of the vulgar English in the North. And that this pronunciation was very anciently expressed by ch, appears in that the Greek χ (which in Greece is at this day so pronounced) (f) was by the Romans expressed by ch in latinized words, as χαρκτης character; and also by the oldest Britons, as we find by a very ancient Greek Gospel written in Latin letters by a Northern British hand; and now preserved at the Bodley Lib. NE. B. 5. 9.

Ch has been by the Cornish these later centuries used for c or k; as, cham, crooked; chein, the back; chelioc, a cock; chic, flesh; chil, the neck.

Ch is also frequently used in the Cornish as the common pronunciation of it is in the English, viz. as ish; as, chacies, chaced; chy, a bouse, &c.

D.

D in old manuscripts, whether Welsh or Cornish, has two pronunciations; for besides the common reading, as in the English and other languages, it serves in the midst and termination for db, or the English th, in this, that, &c. So, medal, soft, is to be read, medhal; echvÿð the evening, echuydh; hÿpð a ram, hurdh; and heib barley, haidh: dd was introduced to express this sound about the year 1400; and in the time of Henry VIII. &c. d pointed at the top or underneath by H. Lhuyd and W. Salisbury at home, and by Dr. Gryffydd Roberts and Roger Smyth in the Welsh books they printed beyond sea. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth Dr. J. D. Rhÿs, Dr. D. Powel, and others, used db; which was afterwards rejected by Dr. Davies, and dd restored.

E.

E is for the most part to be pronounced as in English, excepting that the

the diphthong ei is to be read as ai: for Meir Mary, Cei Caius, heid barley, and gureid roots; must be read, Mair, Kai, haidh, and guraidh.

In the Cornish also the e is to be often pronounced as a; especially in the termination: so, Lies much, nebes some, hager ill-favoured, oges near, pelle furthest, the cowse to speak, the eve to drink, the ewne to rectify; must be read, Lîaz, nebaz, hagar, ogaz, pella; dha kouza, dha eva, dha euna. And daues a sheep, dewes drink, ene there, a lene thence; is read, davaz, deuzaz, ena, a lena, &c.

E is also in the Cornish sometimes, though more rarely, pronounced as a in the beginning of words; for en the, er upon, and deder goodness; must be read, an, ar, dader.

Ee was used by the Cornish (though never by the Armoric Britons or Welsh) as ee in English: for we find the Welsh words guel rods, and min an edge, written by the Cornish gweel and meen.

Ey [or ei] was sometimes pronounced by the Cornish as e long; for deyth a day, must be read, dedh.

E and y were sometimes both by the Guenhuysseg or Guent Welsh and Cornish used indifferently: for in the Went-fet British (g) en in, and ena there, &c. must be read, yn and yna; and the Cornish write either neges or negys business, deufesys or diwyfys chosen, and henwes or henwys named. In our oldest MSS. whether British or Latin, a middle e is sometimes formed like an f, having the top above the line, and the bottom even; as in these Latin words in the above-mentioned Cambridge Juvenius, *f*simina, Res *f*ruat.

(g) The British of the country of Guent, now Monmouthshire; spoken also in Ercinug (or Herefordshire) and Breconck and Glamorgan. Some old Welsh copies of Bryt y Brenhinedh, which is the History published by Jeffrey of Monmouth, are in this dialect.

F.

F had very anciently two pronunciations. For on a mountain called mýnydh gelh Gaer in Glamorganshire, we find the British name Dývrod inscribed on a stone TEFRAVCTI. In the notes on Glamorganshire in Camden I have read this inscription (supposing it might have been Welsh) Deffro it ti, [mayest thou awake] but having found afterwards that the names anciently inscribed on monuments in our country are very often in the genitive case, as, CONBELINI, SEVERINI, AIMILINI, &c. and most if not all Latin, I now conclude it a proper name; and the very same that is otherwise called DUBRITIUS. And indeed, though F has in this example the pronunciation of a v consonant, yet in the oldest manuscripts, as those above-mentioned, it has always the common pronunciation as f in our modern English; this other pronunciation being, as in the Irish, or ancient Scottish, always expressed by b or m. --Whence the words pronounced by the Britons, Kýnvelyn, Kýnvarx, Kýnedhav, Dývrod, &c. came to be written in Latin, Cunobelinus, [& Conbelinus] Conmarchus, Cunotamus, & Dubritius.

In the twelfth century, (or perhaps somewhat sooner) they began to double f, to f, to express the pronunciation it has now in the English; as Ffo flight, Fförch a fork, Ffydlaun faithful, &c. Galf. Mon. and to use the single f commonly as v consonant, but sometimes also as f; for ef a gief [Medh. Mýdhv. &c.] must be read êv a geiph.

The Cornish pronounced f also (besides its common potestas) as v. For assaar mute, yn few alive, and ty a fyth thou shalt be; must be read, avlar, in vêu, tî a vÿdh. And for this reason they sometimes doubled it, though an initial, when it was to be pronounced as f; as, Ffesont a pbeasant.

The initial F in our most ancient orthography has been in after ages, according to the manner of the Spaniards, (the reason whereof is clear from the alteration of the initial Irish F and S) changed into H. For in the Armoric MS. above-mentioned, I find our old word Hÿal a fetter, written Fual; though it be now in the Armoric Hual.

G.

G in the ancient British manuscripts has two sounds, though sometimes none at all. Its common pronunciation is as in English, in the word Given, &c. and the other as ng. For Evegil the gospel, Cyghelleu a chancellor, Log a ship, re-giz pug to tread between, &c. must be read, Evengil, Kynghelhor, Lhong, and fengid rhung. This sound deserves a distinct character, and might be expressed either by the old g [g] or else thus by the same reversed Σ.

In the oldest MSS. g in the middle of a word, if u follows, must often be omitted: — for pinguedaulon secrets, petguar four, and eguinn a nail; must be read, rhinuedholyon, peduar, and eüin.

The Cornish gave the letter G the two pronunciations it has in the English; but when it came before e or i they sometimes interposed b, (as in the Italian) to prevent its being pronounced as in the words Gentle, Giant, &c.

But generally gb in the Cornish is to be pronounced as χ, or the Welsh and old Scottish, cb: for Argh [charge thou] is read arχ.

Also in the Cornish; the letter g in the middle or final syllable seems to have been sometimes pronounced as y. For y presume stergan mogha [the greater stars] &c. should be read, sterrian moyā.

H.

H, when inserted after a vowel, in some old manuscripts served only (as in the High Dutch) to lengthen the preceding vowel: for Ehauc a salmon, is to be read, eôg, and bahet a boar, bæedh.

I.

I in the most ancient MSS. supplied not only the English pronunciation of it in the words pin, thin, &c. and the double e, but also both y and ÿ: for cpicheb a wrinkle, must be read, krÿxedh; bïchan small, bÿchan; and diurÿet thy fingers, dÿ vÿffedh.

In

In the Cornish, the initial I before a vowel, has two pronunciations: for in some words it is pronounced as in English in the word Iew; as Jowan, Jobn; and some as y; for iowynk, young, must be read yunk, or yŷnk.

I and E were used indifferently by the Cornish; for the word Huitlow, tales or stories, is as often written Huetlow.

In a Welsh manuscript I have by me, written about five hundred years since, I find this letter constantly omitted, and supplied with y; and the later Cornish writings make but little use of it.—It was thus distinguished [i] when joined with m, n, or u, as bychein small, Cumin cummin seed.

K.

The letter K never occurs in our oldest British manuscripts, but being afterwards introduced by the Normans, (who made frequent use of it in their old French) I find that about the year 1200, K was almost constantly used in the initial syllables, and C in the termination; and it continued afterwards, tho' not so very much used, till about the year 1500; since which time most writers omitted it, using C constantly in its stead in imitation of the ancients, which yet is not so convenient, because it is in other languages subject to a double pronunciation.

It was frequently used by the Cornish, but in the termination, they pronounced it as g. For Kyk flesh, must be read kîg.

L.

L has two pronunciations in the oldest MSS. That which is common in the English and all other languages, and that which is at present peculiar to the Welsh, and is best learned by the ear. It is performed by hissing the L thro' the teeth sideways, and altering it in the same manner as T is altered by the addition of the b, in the word think, &c.

In the oldest British MSS. this sound was not distinguished from that of the common L, but all that are acquainted with the language know when to use it, except in words that are now retained. However, we find that all words in their primary or dictionary orthography beginning with L are thus asperated. Ex. gr. A band is called lâu, though on his band be Ar i lau; and so of all other words whatever.

About five hundred years ago, and perhaps older, they distinguished this sound by doubling the L, as lloegyr England, llvnbeyn London, &c. which Dr. Gryffydh Roberts, author of the first printed Welsh Grammar, in the time of King Henry the Eighth, not approving of, altered for an l with a point underneath, and Wm. Salusbury for one marked at the top. Afterwards Dr. Davies, the physician, (b) observing that H had been the auxiliary in the ancient Roman orthography, (as Cb, Pb, and Tb) introduced Lb, which obtained, till rejected by Dr. Davies, who used ll in his Grammar printed in the year 1621, and in his Dictionary.

This pronunciation in the sixth manuscript above-mentioned is once expressed by dl; for Fertilitas is there rendered dlonaid, which I suppose must be read lhonædh; and in the Cambridge Juvenius by tbl; for what else can be intended by the fore-mentioned word ceinthliath [canus] but Kýnlhuyd, which would have been anciently intelligible to us, as we may gather from Kýndharedh's being the same with Pendharedh, and Kýnvelyn with Penvelyn, &c.?—The d in the dl above had doubtless the potestas of db or tb, and this shift of expressing lb by tbl was formerly also common among the English when they had occasion to write British names: for we often meet with Thlan for Lhan, and Thloin for Lhûyn, &c. in old records.

No dialect of the British, but the Welsh, retains at present this pronunciation; but the Cornish seem to have had it not many ages since: for in my transcript of the Cornish Vocabulary at the Cotten Library, I find Exercitus rendered exactly as in Welsh, Llu; and Commodum, Lles, though all the other words beginning with L, which are about seventy, are written with a single L.—In a much later Cornish MS. I sometimes meet with ll after a consonant, as Kovllenweugh, fulfil ye, where one l must have been very unnecessary, unless the two were pronounced as lb.

M.

M had anciently two pronunciations, that which is common to all languages, and the pronunciation of the V consonant. This latter pronunciation, though it be still retained by the Irish, occurs only in our most ancient British manuscripts. As in the Ovid above mentioned bigetma, an assembly, must be read, Digydva, and guarimou, theatra, Guarivou: And in the Eutex, emnetiam, I bint, gupiam [or else guniam] I sow, and lammam, I leap; are to be read, Amneidiav, guniav, lhammav. And in Liber Landavenfis we find our common word Kývraith, law, written once Cýmperth, tho' elsewhere Cýpperth, which shews that pronunciation of the m was beginning to grow out of use when this book was written.

This ancient pronunciation of the M accounts for the old Latin orthography of such British names as Kadván, Kýnedhav, Kýnvarx, Brýxvael, Dogvael, Tavvys, Dývneint, and Dýved, which we find written Catamannus, Cunotamus, Conmarchus, Brochmaelus, Dogmaelus, Tamefis, Damnonii, and Dimetæ.

N.

N was always pronounced as at present, but in divers manuscripts of the middle centuries it is distinguishable from U only by the sense: for Areuueu, kidneys, must be read, Arennæ; Tyuer, tender, týner; Uerthy, to strengthen, nerthy, &c.

O.

O in the oldest manuscripts has two pronunciations: for besides its common sound, found, it is sometimes to be read as u: So Chwero, bitter, is χueru; and Troi, through, Trui; and it was hence the name Lhûyd (which signifies Gray) became written anciently Loit, and afterwards Lloyd.

In the Cornish, besides the common pronunciation, as in the English word both, &c. it has also that other English pronunciation of the o, in the words bot, fo, honour, bonest, and such like:—for the words Mos, to go, and Dos, to come, are pronounced as the English words Maw's and Daw's. Vid. A.

O is also often pronounced in Cornish as in English, in the words boney, money, &c. for omma, here, newothow, news, &c. are read, ymma and neuydho.

Oo in Cornish is pronounced as in English, or as u long; for Bool, an ax, is to be read, Bûl.

Ou and ow in the Cornish, are also commonly equivalent to u long; as Gour an Chy, the man of the house, is read, gûr an tshei; and Jowan, John, Dzhûan. But ou in the termination of nouns plural, is now commonly pronounced but as o: for they say Enêzo, islands, and not enesow or enesou; as we find the word written. And the same is to be understood of most of the plurals ending in ow.

P.

P has two pronunciations both in the Welsh and Cornish manuscripts. In the beginning it is always as in other languages, but in the termination as b. So Hep, without, paup, every one, and map, a son, must be read, Heb, pâub, mâb.—It has also the same poteſtas sometimes in the middle; for in the Bodley Ovid De Arte Amandi, the word Aperth [victimâ] is to be read Aberth.

Q.

Q though never used by the Welsh and Irish, was yet received by the Cornish, (as bisqueth never) tho' nothing so much used amongst them, as amongst the Britons of France. It seems however to have been very anciently used in Cornwall, in the same manner as in the French language and the Armoric, viz. Qu as K. For I have observed the ancient British name Kÿnedhav inscribed on a stone at Golval near Penſanz, QVENETAV.

R.

R has in our old manuscripts two pronunciations; for the initial R, if the word be in its primary use, in dictionaries, &c. is always pronounced as in the Greek, asperated. So in that fragment of Eutex in the Bodley Library πῖτ, a ford, is to be read Rhÿd, &c. About the year 1500 I find, according to several MSS. in North Wales, that they doubled the R tho' an initial when it was to be thus pronounced, as rriallon for Rhiualhon, a man's name; instead of which Rb was afterwards receiv'd, which continues. In the small most ancient British hand this letter is so like n, that it is scarce otherwise distinguishable than by the sense. For in the Bodley Ovid we find scena render'd guandi, and Arundo conpen; which must be read Guardi and Corfen. The Cornish very rarely asperate their initial r, saying Risk ha reden rydh, bark and red fern; and not as in Welsh Rhisk a rhedyn rhydh; but they had this aspiration I suppose formerly, for I have frequently observ'd them to say Rhag [for] as well as Rag.

S.

S has but one, and that the common pronunciation, in our Welsh Manuscripts of what age soever; but in the Cornish it was frequently (indeed almost constantly in the termination) pronounced as Z, as Kens rather, is pronounced Kenz. About the twelfth century I find (tho' I can perceive no use of it) that they doubled the s in some Welsh manuscripts, tho' an initial: as y rrylly to look, rrychet thirst, &c. Galf. Mon. & al.

T.

T has, in old manuscripts, three pronunciations.

First, It's genuine pronunciation, as in the English and French. This it generally, if not always, retains in the beginning of a word. The above mention'd inscription TEFRAVCTI, for Dubritius or Dývrod, is the only exception that occurs at present.

Secondly, In the middle sometimes, but most frequently in the termination, it is pronounced as d. Ex. gr. Anuton, perjury; batl, a controversy; legit, eyes. [Ov. Bodl.] Katno, a fox; guaet, blood; calet, bard; must be read, Anydon, dadl, Lhygeid; Kadno, guaed, Kaled.

Thirdly, In the middle and termination it has also very often the pronunciation of db: so Metic, a physician; Myrtin, the poet so call'd; bet, a grave; diuet, an end; and zoglet, the north; are read, Medhig, Mýrdhyn, Bedh, Dieuedh, Gogledh.

It was sometimes used by the Cornish, as db and tb: for Diwet, an end, is pronounced Diuedh; and Bitqueth, ever, should be read Bithqueth; but it has been changed into Bisqueth, and it is lately further corrupted to Besga.

Tb supplied the use of Db in the Cornish as in English. For Daveth, David; Forth, a way; Deth, a day; Fyth, Faith; Ethen, Birds; Goith, a goose, &c. should be read, Davydh, Fordh, Dêdh, Fydh, Ydhyn, Gâydh.

But Tb was constantly pronounced in Wales (as well in the Latin as Welsh) as in the English word thing. And seeing it was introduced to express the Greek θ, however foreigners came to lose its proper sound, it was certainly thus pronounced by the Romans.

U.

U has in our oldest orthography three pronunciations.

First,

First, It was pronounced as u, or the English oo; as noṭuḃ, a needle; Canuill, a candle; pumpl, a goad; and pṣuinn, a bridle; which are to be read, Noduydh, Canuyth, Sumbul, and Frûin.

Secondly, As ÿ or i; for in the Armoric Bodley Manuscript, the word Fual, a buckle; (as also a fetter or shackle) must be pronounced Fyal or Fial. It retained this second pronunciation in all ages, and has been this last century confined to it alone.

The third pronunciation, which occurs but rarely, and only in derivatives, is that of the letter ÿ or i in Bird, Third, &c. For Budicaul, victorious, from Budh, conquest, and plumauc, a bolster, from pluv, feathers; must be read, Bydhÿgol and plyvög.

In the twelfth century I find it frequently used as an V consonant, as it was doubtless much sooner, and ever since (by some at least) till the beginning of the last century, when some began to use Bb, and others discontinued it as needless, F being equivalent to it.

About the year 1200 it was commonly form'd as a V consonant, whether it served as v, u, or y. But in the fourteenth century, when it serves for u, it is made somewhat like the figure of 6, and if a middle consonant it is always as an u vowel, as dyuoṭ, to come; dauaṭ, a sheep: but the initial was as v consonant, (as diauṭ vrac, malt drink) or rather somewhat like a b.

In the Cornish manuscripts also we find the same variety and more; as appears by the following examples.

U: as Dev yv evn, God is righteous; which must be read, Deu yu eun.

V: as the eve, to drink; which is pronounced, Dhe eva.

ÿ: for pup every, and umma bere; is read, pÿb and ÿmma.

I or Y: as Mur, see thou; Ruth, red; Tus, men; Bus, the world; Bugel, a shepherd, &c. which must be read; Mîr, Rydh, Tîz, Byz, Bîgel.

Iu: as Bugh, a cow; Pu, who; Huholder, height; which are pronounced, Biuh, Piü, Hiuhelder.

When in the beginning of a word, u is interposed between an initial G, and a sequel, viz. l, n, or r; a vowel immediately following the sequel, that second vowel has always the accent, and the u is scarce heard; the four letters making but the sound of one syllable. So that Gulan, wool; gunio, to sow; gures, beat, &c. might almost be as well written, G'lán, G'nío, G'rés.

I find in the eighth and ninth centuries (whether earlier I know not) the letter u, as well vowel as consonant, was frequently thus form'd u; and that sometimes the n of the same time differed from it only in transposition of the lines; that of the first place being the longer. Both occur frequently in a broken broken monument at Maes yr ŷŷen in the parish of Lhan Dŷffilio in Denbighshire, which was erected about the year 850, to the memory of Elifeg, Prince of Powys, by his great grandson Kŷngen (or Concenn) 'ab Kadelh' ab Brŷŷwæl (i).

W.

W occurs no where in the most ancient British Manuscripts. But about the year 1200 I find it used sometimes as an V consonant: as Ev a gŷmmŷrth i wua, he took his bow; which must be read, Ev a gŷmmyrth i vŷa. So yewenctyt, youth, for Jevengktyd, &c. and sometimes as y: as datkanw, to relate; which we are to pronounce datkany. But the most common pronunciation of it then, was that which is still retained both by the Welsh and Cornish, viz. as the English w, and oo.

In the Cornish Vocabulary of the Cotten Library, which is the oldest writing I have hitherto met with that I could distinguish for Cornish, this letter when a vowel follows it is thus [p] formed: as tenepen, aside; alpeð, a key, &c. But that being a Saxon letter, and not used by the other Britons nor Scots, it is plain the Cornish received it from the old English alphabet.

X.

X in the ancient Gaulish and British proper names mention'd by the Romans, such as Dumnorix, Cingetorix,

(i) Obiit Romæ An. 854. Vid. Carad. Lancarb. Annales Principem Wall. in Vita Roderici Mag. Ed. a.

Segonax, and Taximagulus, was doubtless pronounced as in the Greek, viz. as the British and Irish ch; nor is there room for much mistake if any should presume to say those particular persons were called by the Gauls and Britons themselves, Dŷvnurŷ, Kŷnturŷ, Seanax, and Doŷvael, which we shall have occasion elsewhere to interpret. That Cæsar should use the x in expressing this Gaulish and British pronunciation may seem one argument towards interpreting his words Græcis literis utuntur, for their having some sort of Greek alphabet: but whatever they might then have, we cannot find by any British or Scottish writings now extant, that we have ever had any use of that letter in our own languages.

Y and ŷ (for what I have hitherto observ'd) were not at all used before the Norman conquest; if so early. About the end of the twelfth century I find ŷ so common in some MSS. that it wholly excluded the use of i. And tho' it be always pointed, yet it must according to the experience of the reader be pronounced sometimes as ŷ, and sometimes as y. In a manuscript written about the year 1260, I find it also constantly written with a point; but the letter i also used with it indifferently. In the books of the fourteenth century the point is generally omitted, and so ever after discontinued.

The difference of pronunciation between the i and y in the Welsh, if the syllable be short, is so small as to be scarce scarce worth distinguishing, unless where it shews the derivation of a word; but if the vowel be long it is much more discernable, viz. the i is pronounced like ee in English, and the y as i (if it were pronounced long) in the words bim, limb, mill, &c. The Greek τ and Latin u should be always express'd by y or \dot{y} in the Welsh: as $\tau\lambda\omega\varsigma$ sheep, W. Hŷn [not hîn] Cuneus, a wedge, W. Kŷn. y and not \dot{y} is to be used in monosyllables, and in the last where there are more syllables than one, but generally the contrary in the first of polysyllables: as Fŷdh, faith, Fŷdhlon, faithful; Dŷn, a man, Dŷnion, men, &c. For when a word written with a y augments its syllables, the y is changed into \dot{y} .

The letter y in Cornish MSS. has various pronunciations. For 1st. it is frequently exchanged with e; as Henwys or henwes, named; Negys or neges, business. 2dly. as i, as Cyte, a city; dŷal, revenge; myl, a thousand. 3dly. as ei: for Try, three, and Kyn, the back, must be read, Trey and Kein. 4thly. As the English initial y before a vowel: as Yâx, healthy; Formyys, form'd; Grevyys, griev'd; Gurythyys, rooted.

Z.

Z was never used in the Welsh, but occurs frequently in the Cornish for db; as Ezewon, Jews, for Edhewon; and Zenenevou, for Dhan anevou, to our souls.

I must not here omit, that the ancients seldom or never altered (as in these latter centuries) the initial letters in writing; leaving that wholly to the experienced reader's pronunciation; as, in respect of the other letters, we find many words are still left in most languages.

In Liber Landavenfis, a short account in Welsh of some privileges of that Church begins thus. Lŷmma y cympeith ha bŷyeint eccluyys Teliau olan Taf, &c. which would now be written: Llymma y gyfraith a braint Eglwys Teilo o Landâf. So in the same place, Heb avail—o drais—o gynllwyn—is written, Hep gauail—o tpeis—o cŷnluŷn. And in Taliesin, bi tpein bi teint, &c. where we now write, Dy drwyn, hy ddannedd.

The old manuscripts distinguish not proper names by capital initials: for the names Rhŷs, Evan, and Mary, we find written rys, ieuan, and meir; and so generally of all others.

The Cornish frequently expressed a long vowel by doubling it, writing Pâl, a spade, paal; and Mein, a stone, myyn.

The British language, whether Welsh, Cornish, or Armoric, has the accent in the penultima; excepting such polysyllables as have a mute and liquid in the termination; as Amheravdyr, an emperor, Paladar, a shaft, Kadwaladar, Gwynhawdyl, &c. where the accent is in the antepenultima: and the reason of this exception is, because that very often the vowel interposed betwixt the mute and liquid, and sometimes also the liquid quid, itself is not distinctly pronounced;—for Gwynhawdyl is pronounced Gunodl, and for Kadwaladar and Amherawdwr, the common people say Kadwalad and Amherod.

PERMUTATION AND ADDITION OR OMISSION OF INITIAL CONSONANTS IN THE CORNISH.

THE initial B is frequently changed into V consonant; nor is there indeed any Cornish word, whose primary or dictionary initial begins with V consonant.

Biuh, a cow: Ma'n viuh gen leauh, the cow is with calf.

Bêu, living; Yn vêu, alive.

Bohodzhak, poor; Gen an bobl vÿ-hodzhak, with the poor people.

Tubn, bot; Mar dubn, so bot.

Tra, a thing; Re a ydn dra, too much of one thing.

Lat. Trinitas, Corn. An Drinzis, the Trinity. The reason hereof is because the word being of the feminine gender, and having no plural, the particle An [the] changes the T into d according to the propriety of the British.

T—th. Tîs, men; Oû thîs, my servants;
 Tân, fire; Douz ha thân, water and fire.

PERMUTATION OF LETTERS IN THE MODERN CORNISH.

1. Where they formerly used x, (or as they wrote it gb) they now use b only; as, † Arxadou [commands] now Arhadou.

2. The letter d in the middle or termination they have changed into s, which they almost constantly pronounce as z. As, † Peder, four, afterwards pefuar [and since padzhar] † Nod, a mark, now noz; and Hêd, length, now Hêz and hÿz.

3. I find db in the termination sometimes changed into r; as, † Menedh, a mountain, now mener. But this happens very rarely.

4. S [or z] has been changed into dz, Ex. gr. † Luys, grey, now Lûdzh; † Guoys, blood, Gûdzh; † Kresy, to believe, Kridzhi; † An drensês, the Trinity, An drendzhez; † Bohosak, poor, bohodzak; † De bify, to pray, dhe pidzhi.

5. T has been changed to Tsh; as, Ti, thou, Tîhei; † Ty, a house, Tîhey, &c. which Tsh is also sometimes changed to dz, as, Ol mein y dzhÿi, all in the house.

6. Tb was sometimes changed to s; as, Bythqueth, never, now Bysqueth and Besga.

ADDITION.

7. A inserted: † Dên, a man, now Déan.

8. B is generally inserted before a middle m: † Lemal, to leap, now Lebmal, &c.

9. D is inserted no less often before a middle n, and more rarely before r; as, Dadno, under him, where formerly Dano; and dhe medra, for da mira, to behold.

10. H is often premised to words beginning with vowels; as, Eùhal, bigb, Mùr heùhal, so leſtily; Emlodh, figbting, Dhe hemlodh, to figbt; Arxa, to command, Me a hyrx, I will command; Ie-dheùon, the Jews, Dhen Hydheùon, to the Jews.

11. K is sometimes, tho' but rarely, inserted; as, † Delyou, leaves, now Del-kiou.

12. L is premised (for what I have observed) only in the word Lavalou, ap-ples; which is but a very late corruption of Avalou.

13. The Welsh y and French e so constantly prefixed to words whose Latin begin with ſc, ſp, or ſt, is very well omitted by the Corniſh. For they ſay, Skrifa, to write, from the Latin Scribo, which in Welsh is Yſgrivenny, and in French Eſcrire.

LETTERS OMITTED.

14. The initial A is of late frequently omitted in the pronouns. For they often ſay or write Goz [or gez] for Agez, your, and ſometimes Gan for Agan, our.

15. The initial G before u, and another vowel or liquid, is, according to the propriety of all the dialeſts of the Britiſh, to be occasionally omitted. As [in the Corniſh] Guili, a bed, Mez dhe 'uili, to go to bed; gùl, making, Da'll, to make; Ganou, the mouth, Yn a 'anou, in his mouth; Guorhemmyrn, a command, a uormmeyn, his command. The ſame alſo holds in the initial G before r; as, Grâz, grace, Lên a 'raz, full of grace.

16. The particle 'Rig [did] which is commonly premised to the preter tenſe, is generally abridged to Ry or Re, and written either ſeparately, as, Me ry gos-kaz, I have ſlept; or annexed to the verb, as, Me rygollas, I have loſt.

SOME FURTHER DIRECTIONS FOR READING OLD BRITISH MANUSCRIPTS.

ONE main difficulty we have in understanding the ancient manuscripts, is their frequent annexing of the particles not only with other words, but also sometimes with one another.--Some examples of other words united do also occur, but those are but very few in respect of the particles.

EXAMPLES OF WORDS UNITED IN THE OLD WELSH MANUSCRIPTS.

A, and; Gulŷb afŷch, for Gulŷb a fŷx, wet and dry; Aphob peth, and every thing, for a phôb pêth; Ada ŷnt, and they are good, for a da ŷnt.

A premised to the preterperfect and future tenses. Ef awnaeth, he did; Ef aeth, he went; Disgŷl arouc, he beheld, for Disgŷl a oruc: Ef auac, it will breed; Gŷr aelvŷt avallach, one whose name was Avalhach.

Ar, upon; Aruôb for ar vodh, in the manner.

Drvc, bad; Drŷcvaet, ill blood.

E, the; Emab, the son.

E, his; Eteyrnas, his kingdom.

En, in; Enŷ, in the.

Fi, i; annex'd to the end of the verb: Nŷ chanlŷnafŷ, I will not follow.

In, in; Intiechreu, in the beginning.

Kyn, as; Kŷnduet, as black; Kŷn-vŷnnet, as white; Kŷndeccet, as fair.

Na, not; Nabigavn bŷnŷon, that men cannot.

O, out of, of, from; Ohonav, of it, or out of it; Onadunt, of them, &c.

Or, out of the; Ortan, out of the fire.

Uyn, my; Ar uŷndvŷ goes, on my legs.

Y, the; Ar ŷbeacr, on the earth.

Y, to, or for; Ybŷnŷon, for men; Ymŷnneu, for me.

Yg, in; before nouns beginning with g or k. Yggeneu, in the mouth.

Ygan, with; Ygandŷn, with man.

Ym, into; ymvl, into a pit.

Yn, in; ynŷr eil, in the second; ŷnŷ drŷbŷd, in the third.

Yr, the; yreneiteu, the souls, for yr eneidia.

WORDS UNITED AND ABBREVIATIONS IN THE CORNISH.

A, of; Aras, of grace; askeyans, and askenteleth, of knowledge; Ath asow, of thy ribs.

A, a sign of the preter and future tenses; whence Am, bath me, or will me; Neb am gruk, who bath created me; and Ath, have thee, bath thee, will thee, &c. Me ath kelma, I will bind thee; Nŷ ath dæg, we will bring thee.

A, from; whence An, from the; which is also often annexed to the noun; as, Annef, from the heaven.

Agos, or agyż, your, loses often the three first letters, and has the last added to the end of a word: as, Evos kowl, sup up your broth; for Evough agos kowl.

Den, a man; Denfyth, any man; Den-ol, every one.

Du, for Dedh, a day; as, Du yow, Thursday; Du pask, Easter.

E before verbs of the present tense; Dew ewyr, for Dew e wŷr, God knows.

Gueth, and weth, a time or turn, Lat. Vicis, is generally annexed to nouns of time and number; as, Dŷweth, or de-weth, twice; Milgueth, and milweth, a thousand times; Zylgueth, on a Sunday; Bisgueth, never.

Ha, and; Han, and the; Ham, and my; Hay, and his; Hai, and her; Hath, and thy; Tŷ hath vaw, thou and thy boy.

Hêd, for hedda, that; He dŷu, that is.

Hep, without; Hepparou, incomparable.

Hon, this female; wence Homma, this woman here, for hon omma.

Ma, this, is generally subjoined to its substantive; as, An guelenina, this rod; An drama, this thing; An drema, this town.

Na, that, is likewise annexed to its substantive; as, An mawna, that lad; An marhna, that horse, &c.

Nan, now; Nanŷw, now is.

Ne, not; Nel e, for ne el e, he cannot.

Nep, any; Yn neppow, in any country; Yn nepplas, any where.

Ny, and nyn, not; Nynŷys nynŷiw, there is not; Nym, not to me; Nym bys, [and sometimes nymbys] not to me.

Po, for pa so, when is; Po marh le-dres, when a horse is stolen; Ple, where; Plemons, where they are.

Por, pur, and pyr, very; Porthal, very blind.

Rum, batb or bast me; Tŷrum gruk, thou hast made me.

Tha and the, to; Thegerthes, to go; Then menes, to the mountain; Than wetan, to the tree; Than nor, [and than dor] to the earth, &c. So Theth, unto thy; as, theth huŷr, and theth hor, to thy sister.

Tro, or try, [that, as,] loses its vowel when annexed with a word beginning with one; as, Maga liaz tres faut thŷugh, as many as you have occasion for; for Maga liaz trŷ ez faut dhiuh.

Ymma, or omma, this here, is sometimes subjoined to the noun; as, Aberth an chymma, within this house; for Aberh an tŷhei omma.

Some directions might be expected here, for the distinguishing the dialects wherein MSS. are written; but the poets, and other authors, using any words that occurred in books, whatever countries they had been written in; there is not near that difference of dialects in manuscripts, that we find in speaking; though there be yet enough to render them distinguishable, on attention and observation.

Us, es, and ys, the terminations of the third person singular of the preter tense in the southern dialect, are not, as is commonly apprehended, a late corruption: for I find them in manuscripts of 500 years standing, and the following examples particularly in a copy of Bryd y Brenhinaedh, written about that time.

time. Ynteu a achwanegvs, be augmented; En e llyfyr a eprivennvs Gildas, in the book that Gildas wrote; Ef a rannvs, be shared; Ef a ymbangoffes fynnavn or dayar, a well sprung out of the earth; Nýt arfvýðvys ciryoet, be never feared; Oðyna ý geðewys beuno e lle hvnnv, then Beyno left that place.

Nor is the pronoun efo, used in N. Wales, less authentic. For in an old manuscript of the life of St. David, I find it frequently occurs. Yn ýr hon ný allavð neb pregethu, namýn efo, wherein none but he could preach, &c.

Besides the termination of the third person singular of the verbs of the preter tense, books written in South Wales are distinguishable by such words as are known to be of common use in that country, and scarcely or not at all spoken in North Wales: such as Sýnyo and harýanu, to regard or take heed; Dodi, to set or put; Herki, to fetch; Fuf-tyaw, to beat; Hela, to drive; Hel and hela, to send; Deifif, to desire; Eryvn, to expect; Kýuedach, feasting, carousing; Argol, a sign, an argument; or tu maes, on the out side; Falb, a court or yard; Catno, a fox; Pawyn, and pawen, a peacock, &c. &c.

As for the Cornish and Armoric, the difference is so very wide betwixt their manuscripts of the latter centuries and our's, that though one were well skilled in Welsh, it would yet require about a month's time to understand a book written in either of those dialects. But if there be any writings extant therein, so old as the 7th, 8th, 9th, or 10th centuries; I presume they are scarce distinguishable as to Grammar from Welsh; and may be known only by some words peculiar to those countries; wherein the curious may in some measure satisfy themselves from their respective Vocabularies.

I have hitherto met with no very ancient writing that seemed to be Cornish; unless we should suspect for such an elegy on the death of Gereint 'ab Erbyn, a nobleman of Cornwall or Devon, about the year 540, who is mentioned in the Triades as one of the three greatest Admirals of the British seas; the other two being March 'ab Meirchyon, and Gwenwyn 'ab (k) Naw. There is in Cornwall a parish called Gerrans, which is the modern pronunciation of Gereint, (they constantly changing t into s) and another called Trev Erbin, which might be so denominated from his father. It is said in the elegy that he was of the borders of Devon, and that he was slain at Llongborth.

Yn llongborth ýllas gereint,
Gvr ðevr o gobir ðýfneint;
Wýntwý yn llad gýt as ldeint.

Yn llongborth llas ý arthur,
Gvyr ðevr kýmmyuýnt o ður
Amheravðyr llýwýavðyr llaur, &c.

The word Re, which in the Cornish signifies too much, as also soon or quickly, occurs frequently in this elegy; together with a great many others, such as

(k) Goninan, a proper name, common at this time in Cornwall.

Eloravr, gwýtheint kýmryðh, rhedhaint, odhew, gwehin, moloch, eubwýb, &c. which if ever we had them, are lost in the Welsh. But it is owned this is not enough to conclude the author to have been of Cornwall or Devon; where probably any British was at that time understood. And the old copy I have of it, is written among some elegies ascribed to Llywarch hên.

In old manuscripts the particle ý or ýr which elsewhere answers to the English the, is used before proper names as well as appellatives: as, Heb ý bendigeituran, said Bendigeidfran. So, Heb ý matholwch; Heb ý gvenhvýuar; Heb ýr owein; Heb ýr arthur, &c. and the useless particles ýb and ef; as ýb attebavð ýnteu, he answered them; Ef a lorcet ý corf, his body was burnt; Ef a ýmbangoffes fýnnavn, a well sprung forth, and such like, occur very frequently.

In interrogations the verb Sum is often omitted in old writings, as Chvetleu gennýt? hast thou any news? Dos uorwýn heb ý gvenhvýuar a gouýn ýr corr pvý ý marchavc racko? And, sometimes it is annexed to the pronoun, both making but one word; as, Pieu ý niuer llongeu, or llogeu, hýnn? Whose ships are these? A govýn a wnaeth pioebh ý meirch, and he asked whose were the horses. — It was sometimes also omitted in the answer; as, Mi ieuan heb ef, I am John said he.

The pronouns were sometimes differently placed and expressed from what is now usual: for whereas we now say, Pan gýnta ag a galvav ði, [as soon as I shall call thee] in the old MSS. we find, Pan ith alwýf gýnta.

But having dwelt long enough on the old orthography, &c. used in Wales, let us return to the surviving British of Cornwall.

C H A P. III.

OF THE ARTICLES AND NOUNS.

A, y, vn.

IN Cornish manuscripts the article a, or, as it is otherwise written, y, answers to the English A or An; and so does sometimes un, in imitation probably of the French; as, Un dra, a thing; Un vennen, a woman; Un êl, an angel.

An is equivalent to The; as, An dên, the man; An byz, the world; Dre ôl an dre, through all the town. It takes place also sometimes before pronouns; as, An rena, those: or is inserted between a pronoun and noun; as, Pa an dra? what thing? Pa an marh? what horse?

This particle An becomes sometimes Han; as, Pa han keyson? what charge or accusation? And is also written yn; as, Aberth yn tshymma, within this house. Han is also written for ha 'n, [and the] as, Dhert gudra an devaz han gour, from milking the sheep and the goats.

Dhan is a contraction of dhe and an, and signifies to the or unto the; as, Dhan may-na, to that lad; Dhan guaz-na, unto that fellow: and so a'n or an, of or from, or out of, is but a an united.

OF NOUNS SUBSTANTIVE.

The terminations of substantives are in this language, as generally in others, very various and uncertain; but yet some particulars therein, as they may contribute some help to the memory, seem to deserve our notice.

1st. A great number of the abstracts and verbal substantives which in English generally terminate in ness, ty, ion, hood, ship, and th; as, goodness, equity, submission, livelibood, friendship, strength, and such like; have in this language their terminations in der, ans, or eth; as we find by the following examples.

Splander and Goleuder, brightness; Tiulder, darkness; Teuder, thicknes; Tanauder, thinnes; Pysder, heaviness; Skavder, lightness; Kalatter, bardness; Medalder, softness; Guander, weakness; Tadder, goodness; Glanithder, cleanliness; Huekter, sweetness; Tekter, beauty.

Mÿgilder and tÿmder, warmth, heat; Dounder, depth; Zexter, and Zehar, drought; Euhelder, height; Guirder, truth; Krevder, strength.

Givians, pardon, forgiveness; Diskue-dhyans, demonstration, revelation, or discovery; Beunans, life, livelibood; Mar-nans, death; Sylvans, salvation; Skians, knowledge; Dyskyans, learning; Tyby-ans, thought, imagination; Trystians, sorrow, mournfulness; Gordhyans, worship, honour; Karens, love, friendship; Kridz-hans, faith, confidence.

Skiantoleth,

Skiantoeth, prudence; Folneth, and Foloreth, foily; Banneth, a blessing; Mÿhterneth [+Mychterneth] sovereignty; Kÿzeleth, peace, peaceableness, tranquillity; Bolenegeth, the will; Gwyroneth, truth; Gouegneth, fraud, deceit, falsehood.

2dly. The most common termination of the names of natural bodies is in an or en, and sometimes on; and not a few of them do also end in k, or g.

As, Guedhan, a tree; Guelan, a rod; Glaſtan, and glaſtanan, an oak; On, onnan and enuedhan, an aſh; Guernan, an alder tree; Skawan, an elder; Spernan, a thorn; Bannolan, a broom; Eithinan, a furze buſh; Panan, a parſnip; Redanan, a brake or fern; Tavalan, a dock; Bledzhan, a flower; Moran, a bramble berry; Udzheon, an ox; Meſlan, a maſtiff; Mynnan, a kid; Lygodzhan, a mouse; Pedrevan, a lizard; Kuilken, a frog; Krohan, a bide; Tethan, an udder; Pidnian, the brains; Azan, a rib; Guzig-an, a bladder; Gullan, a gull; Kÿlomman, and Kÿlobman, a pigeon; Gÿlvan, a ſparrow; Trodzhan, a ſtare; Gûradnan, a wren; Kriban, a bird's creſt; Plyvan, a feather; Hernan, a pilchard; Krogan, a ſhell; Guihan, a perriwinkle; Murrianan, an ant or emmet; Gûanan, a bee; Guiban, a fly.

Kazak, a mare; Ledzhek, a beifer; Onak, a lion; Skÿuarnak, a bare; Kragan, a frog or toad; Kulliag, a cock; Gylvinak, a curlew; Kyvelak, a woodcock; Girak, a needle-fiſh; Keinak, a ſkad; Stiphak, a cuttle-fiſh.

3dly. Nouns official, or appellations of tradesmen, or men of any employment, and other metaphorical names, derived from them, end generally in r; but ſometimes alſo in k and ſometimes in s, or (as anciently) in t, or d. Ex. gr. Kyſſylier, a counſellor; Hydor, an impoſtor; Pyſtryor, a forcerer; Pyſgadar, a fiſherman; Reuadar, a rower; Belender, a miller; Trykkiar, a fuller; Liuyar, a dyer; Gueadar, a weaver; Bynkiar, a cooper; Ymdowlar, a wreſtler; Gÿnnadar, a ſower; Midzhar, a reaper; Stenor, a water-wagtail, from Stên, a milking pail; from whence it is called in Welch, Brîth ÿ vyches.

Methik and medhik, a phyſician, a chirurgeon; Marhak, a knight; Ounek, a coward; Gûak, a liar; Kontrevak, a neighbour.

Sylvias, a ſaviour, a redeemer, or deliverer; Kuithyas [+Guithiat] a keeper, a guardian, a berdsman; Kernias [+Kerniat] a piper; +Renniat, a ſharer, a carver; +Seuyad, a taylor; +Ferhiat, a thief; +Purcheniat, a forcerer; +Helviat, one that drives or purſues; +Scriviniat, a ſcrivener.

4thly. Such nouns, when of the feminine gender, are commonly form'd by the addition of es; as, +Seuyades, a woman taylor; +Fellores, one that plays on the violin; Portheres, a woman-porter; Pechadyres, a ſinner; Peſtriores, a witch; Enevales, a ſhe beaſt.

5thly. We have already obſerved that d and t in the Welch, are changed to s or z or z in the modern Cornish. And this rule is so general in the termination of nouns, that it very rarely fails, unless in old manuscripts.

6thly. The nouns that terminate in w [or u] in Welsh, end commonly in o, in the Cornish: as, Karu, a stag, Corn. Karo; Taru, a bull, Taro; Guedhū, deprived, Guedho; xueru, bitter, Hūero; Medhū, drunken, Medho; Marū, dead, Maro.

7thly. The Cornish nouns that agree with the Latin, never terminate in a vowel, but generally in the penultimate, or else in the last consonant of the Latin; or at least in a consonant of the same class; as appears by the following examples.

Pan, and padn, cloath; L. Pannus.
Sythyn, a week; Septimana.
Methik, a physician; Medicus.
Bouin, beef; Bovina.
Padal, a pan; Patella.
Skidal, a dish; Scutula, Scutella.
Kaul, broth; from Caulis.
Manak, a glove; from Manica.
Hevez, a shirt or smock; Camisia.
Roz, a wheel; Rota.
Ardar, and aradr, a plow; Aratrum.
Guarrak, a bow; Arcus.
Forn, an oven; Furnus.
Manal, a sheaf of corn; Manipulus.
Veulz, a reaping-hook; Falx.
Kêz, cheese; Caseus.
Ladar, a thief; Latro.
Egliz, a church; Ecclesia.
Zanz, a saint; Sanctus.
Drindas, and drindzhaz, the Trinity; Trinitas.

Speriz, a spirit; Spiritus.

Pâsk, Easter; Pascha.

Penkast, Whitfuntide; Pentecoste.

The genders of nouns are two: the masculine and the feminine.

All proper names of men, and the appellations of all tradesmen; and men of any employment or profession, are of the masculine of course; and so are the names of winds and of the months; of the senses, of virtues and vices; and of metals.

All proper names of women and appellatives of their employment; as also the names of countries, and of rivers, and of towns, villages, and churches, are of the feminine.

As to the names of animals; the gender or sex, (as also the foetus) is distinguished in all domestic quadrupeds and birds, and such of the edible wild ones as are most considerable, by particular names. As Taro, a bull; Biuh, or † Byux, a cow; Udzheon, an ox; [† Odion;] Lond, a bullock; Ledzhek, a heifer; Deneuoid, a yearling; Leauh, or † Loch, a calf; Hor, and † Hordh, a ram; Davaz, or † Davat, a sheep; Moulz, and † Mols, a wether; Oan, and † Oin, a lamb; Marh, [Marx] a horse; Kazak, and † Kasség, a mare; Ebol, and Ebal, a colt; Bÿk, [† Bôx] a buck, as also a he-goat; Gavar, a goat, and Myn, or Mÿnnan, a kid; Baedh, a boar; † Torx, and Hôx, a hog; † Gûys, Haneu, and Hôh, a sow; and † Porxell, a pig; Kei, or † Kî, a dog; ḡêst, a bitch; and Koloin, a whelp; Gurkath, a be-cat; Kâth, a cat; Karo, a deer; † Ewik, a hind; Loch, [or Leauh] Euig, a saun; † Kytionx, a roe-buck; † Yorx, a roe.
E and

Of the other wild beasts, the larger sort are commonly used in the masculine gender; as, Olifans, an elephant; Caurmarx, a camel; Lêu, a lion; Blaidh, a wolf; Brôch, a badger; Lûarn, a fox; Devergi, and † Dourgi, an otter; Tahua, a sea calf; unless we should perhaps except Asen, an ass; and Ors, a bear.

And the small ones of the feminine; as, † Skouarnog, or Skÿuarnak, a hare; † Koitgath, a wild cat; † Yeogen, a ferret; † Louennan, and kodna guidn, a weesle; Lÿgodzhan, or † Logoden, a mouse; † Gôdh, and Gûdh dher, a mole.

† Keliok, or Kulliag, a cock; Yâr, a hen; Keliokuydh, a gander; Gûydh, a goose; Payn, a peacock; Paynefs, a peahen; Kuliagez, a drake; Hez, [Hoet] a duck.

As to the other birds, some are constantly used in the masculine; as, † Er, an eagle; Bargez, [† Skoul] a kite; Elerx, a swan; Gylvinak, a curlew; Kyvelak, a woodcock; Melhuez, a lark; Golvan, a sparrow; Guradnan, a wren.

And others feminine; as, † Marvran, [mod. brân vrez] a raven; Mola dhiu, [† Moelh] an ouzle or black-bird; † Kolom, or Kÿlobman, a pigeon; Brân, a crow; † Kydhon, al Kylobman Kûz, a quioist, or ring-dove; Guilan, a gull; Gÿrgirik, a partridge; † Hule, and ula, an owl;

Kodna huilan, a lapwing; Kôg, a cuckow, &c. &c.

The names of fish are generally of the masculine gender; as, † Morvil, a whale; † Morhox, a porpoise; † Ehoc, or êaug, a salmon; Mehal, a mullet; † Brethil, a mackerel, &c. except Zilli, an eel; Môr-nader, a lamprey; Karlath, a ray, or thornback; Gavar môr, a segar, or long oyster; Kÿligi, a cockle; Brenigan, a limpet; Estren, an oyster; † Mesclen, and Bezlen, a muscle; Kreggen, a shell.

The names of insects; as, Guenenen, a bee; Hÿilen, or Huilan, a beetle; Molhuidzhon, a snail; † Gûhien, a wasp; † Hÿadnan, a flea, &c. are mostly of the feminine gender.

The names of trees terminated formerly in en, though now (as they are commonly pronounced) in an, and were all, as in Welsh, of the feminine gender; as, Onnen, an ash; Glastanen, an oak; Guernen, an alder; Kelingen, bolly; Bedêwen, a birch; Colwidhen, a bassle; divers of them terminated in—bren, that word which is now used for timber, signifying then a tree; as, Oleubren, an olive tree; Guinbren, a vine; Perbren, a pear tree; Plymbren, a plumb tree; Pinbren, a pine; Moyrbren, a mulberry tree.

Besides the concord of the adjective with it's substantive, the genders of substantives are distinguished, in words beginning with mute consonants, by the particle an [the]: for if the substantive following an, retains its primary initial, initial, or that which is its first letter in the order of Dictionary; Ex. gr. Marh, a borſe; An marh, the borſe; it is always of the masculine gender. And when it is of the feminine, the leading mute is changed into a secondary initial, viz. a ſofter mute of the ſame claſs; unleſs the word begin with Gul, gun, or gur; in which caſe the only alteration is, that the g is omitted. Ex. gr. Karrak, a rock; but the rock is An garrak: ſo, Fordh, or forh, a way; An vordh, the way; Bènin, a woman; An vènin, the woman; Tîz, men, people; An dîz, the people; Gurêg, a wife; An urêg, the wife. So that the changes of the primary initial mutes into the ſecondary, denoting the feminine gender, are as follow:

LABIALS P-B, B-V, M-v, F-v, and R sometimes.

DENTALS T-D, D-dh.

PALATALS K-G, and G omitted as above.

As to the caſes, there is but little difficulty, there being but one termination throughout the ſingular number, and another in the plural; ſo that they are only diſtinguiſhed by their article annexed, or prepoſition, or place: as,

IN THE SINGULAR NUMBER.

Nom. Levar, a book.

Gen. A'n levar, of the book.

Dat. Dhe'n levar, to the book.

Acc. An levar, the book.

Voc. A levar, o book.

Abl. Gen an levar, with the book.

IN THE PLURAL.

Nom. Levrou, or — ro, books.

Gen. A'n levrou, of the books.

Dat. Dhe'n levrou, to the books.

Acc. An levrou, the books.

Voc. A levrou, o books.

Abl. Gen an levrou, with the books.

Nouns of the masculine gender change (as above) their primary initial mutes in the genitive caſe, after the particle a, [of, or of a] but not after an [of the] as in thoſe of the feminine. For they ſay, blew an pen, or, (as lately corrupted) an pedn, the hair of the head; and a ben hag a thrûz, of head and foot. So from Guîn, wine; Guedran a uîn, [a glaſs of wine] but a glaſs of the wine is Guedran an guîn.

An initial F is turned into b in the genitive caſe, &c. after the particle a'n (or as it is always written) an: as, Flôh, a child; A'n hlôh, of the child; Dhe'n hlo, to the child, &c.

They uſed formerly, and do yet in ſeveral words, a variation of the vowel (whether the firſt or the only one) in the genitive caſe, &c.

Particularly a, I find changed into e: as, Marh, a borſe; Rên verh, borſe mane; Buzl verh, borſe dung; and e into i, y, or ey; as, Merh, a daughter; An vyrrh, of the daughter; Pen, a bead; Er dha byn, againſt thee; q. d. on thy bead; and, Er agas pyn huy, againſt you; Huêl, work; Mein huêyl, work-ſtones, or ſtones for building; Krês, the miſt; in kreys an dre, in the miſt of the town.

Nouns of matter admit of no particle in the genitive; as, Bezaü our, a ring of gold; Forh arhans, a fork of silver; Yg horn, an iron hook; Plankys zaban, deal-boards.

The dative case is frequently used in the Cornish; being governed, besides others, by the same verbs as in the Latin, and applied much in the same manner: as we find by the following examples.

The dative case after the verb [Sum] Yinä dhymmo, I have. q. d. verbatim Est mihi. 'Ma marh dhÿ bredar vî, my brother has a horse. q. d. Est equus fratri meo. Idzha 'n lêaü dhÿ'n dên Yÿnk-na? has that young man the ague? 'Ma 'gen ehaz nyi dhen, we have our health. Ez konnez dhiu'? have you supped?

After verbs of bidding or commanding] Deü dhymmo vî a erxys, God hath commanded me; Reys yu dheuh, you must.

Of giving] Mi a re dhyü, I will give you; Ro dhedhe, give them; Ro dhym and dro e dhymmo, give it me; Ystyn e dhym, reach it me.

Of promising] Mi ai didhiys dhodho, I have promised it him; Me a ürontiav dhys, I will warrant thee.

Of believing] Krez dhebm, believe me; Rag fraga na grefydh dhym lavarou? Why dost not believe my words?

Of paying] Deü a dâl dheuh? God shall reward you? Ny dal dhÿnny, we should not; Ny dal dhodho, be ought not.

Of bearkening unto, or obeying] Ty rig golla üorty, thou hast bearkened unto her.

Of speaking] Lavar dhÿmmo, speaking unto me; Me a lever dhÿs, I tell thee.

Of putting or adding] Gorra an dra fin dhan ramenat, add this to the rest.

Of going] Monez [or mÿnez] dha dre, to go to town.

Of becoming, &c.] Pÿ gotho dhiu' baz, when it would become you to be.

Of sending] Rhag danyn dheuh, to send to you.

Of bringing] Ev ai dyg dhym, be brought it unto me.

Of asking] Govyn orto, ask him; Govÿnna üorth e vredar, ask his brother.

The participles likewise govern the same cases with their verbs; and some adjectives also, as in the Latin, require a dative.

As, Laverys dhebm, spoken unto me; Gÿtheffys dhyu', offered unto you; Yinä govenek dhym, I remember; Yma e pyr havel dhys, He is very like thee.

There are three numbers in the Cornish, the singular, dual, and plural: the dual, as in the Armorik, serves only to express some parts of an animal that are pairs, pairs, and is made by prefixing di, diu, or deau [two] to the singular, and uniting them; as, † La, lau, and lâv, a band; Diula, and † diulev, bands; Lagaz, an eye; Deaulagaz, the eyes; Skodh, a shoulder; Diskodh, the shoulders; Brêh, an arm; Dibreh, the arms.

THE PLURAL TERMINATIONS OF SUBSTANTIVES.

The first plural terminates in ou; as, Aluedh, a key, pl. Aluedhou and alhu-edhou, keys; Arv, a weapon, pl. Arvou; Bedh, a grave, pl. Bedhou; Dagar, a tear, pl. Dagrou; Daraz, a door, darazou; Ro, a gift, rohou.

So that this first plural, which, as in the Armoric, is the most common, may, generally speaking, be formed by adding ou, or iou, to the last letter of the singular, or else to its substitute, which is always of the same class; as p for b, t for d, d for s, &c.

When the singular terminates in db, l, or r, the plural commonly ends in icu; as, Dydh, a play, pl. Dydhicu; Klêdh, a ditch, Kledhieu; † Gurêdh, a root, Gurêdhieu; Menedh, a mountain, Menedhieu; Mâl, a joint, Meliou; zêr, a word, zêriou and zirriou.

Sometimes a final consonant of the singular, is doubled in the plural, or else (which is equivalent) the vowel immediately preceding is accented; as, Fôs, a wall, pl. Fossou or Fòsou; Lêr, [† lôr] a floor, Lerriou or lèrou; † Guli, a wound, Gollyou; Garget, a garter, Gargettou.

Some words, whose singular terminate in l, have g subjoined thereunto in the plural; as, Teual, dark, pl. Tulgu; Kýffyl, counsel, pl. Kyfylgou.

A vowel interposed in the last syllable between a mute and a liquid in the singular, is frequently omitted in the plural; as, Levar, a book, Levroù; Dagar, a tear, Dagrou; Tempel, a church, Templys.

The final d, though it be generally changed into s or z in the singular, is yet sometimes retained in the plural; as, Pehaz, sin, pl. Pehadou; because Pehaz is but a corruption of the old word Pehad, Pexhad, or Pexat. So from Arhas and guorhemmynnias, a command, Arhadou and guorhemmynnadou:—So Falladou, frauds, failings; and Inniadou, repulses or denials.

This plural in ou is frequently pronounced at present as if it terminated in o; as, Noedho, news; Huelio, works; Delkio, leaves; Godho, geese; Neitho, nests: and sometimes in au; as, Kêau, bedges; Guellau, beds; Breihau, arms; or else in u; as, Luzu, herbs; Ludnu, cattle.—In the Welsh this plural terminates in au, which yet is pronounced as æ or e, answering to the nominative pl. of the first declension of the Latin.

The second plural ends in i, as, Guidhili, Irish-men; Kuithizi, guardians, keepers; keepers; Aylŷdhi, lords; Mestrizi, masters; Servifi, and Servidzhi, servants; Trahezi mein, stone-cutters; Guellynni, rods; Muzi, maids; Kastilli, castles; Legesti, lobsters; Ymilli, limbs, members; Porelli, bogs, pigs.—So that this plural agrees with the Latin nominative of the second declension.

The third plural ends in ion, and might be called the personal plural, in regard most appellations that are personal are of it; as, Kristionnion [now Krestudnian] Christians; Zouzon, the English; † Brethon, the Britons; Kembrion, the Welsh; Idhevon, the Jews; Marrëzion, and Marsdëzion, knights; Skuerrion, esquires; Boxesëzion, the poor; Klevion, the sick; Kardouion, friends; Skylùrion, scholars; Dyskybillion, disciples; Guithòrion, workmen; Guefion, mean fellows; Gouëzion, lyars; Ladron, thieves.

Some other nouns have also the same plural; as, Empinion, the brains; Govidzion, sorrows; Marthëzion, wonders. But those are but few in comparison of the others.

This plural answers to the nouns of the third declension in the Latin that terminate in ones; as, Senones, Sueffones, Britones; Nafones, Pisones, Cicrones; Histrones, Fullones, Latrones, &c.

The fourth plural terminated formerly (as still in the Welsh) in edb; as, Brederedh, brothers; Eledh, angels; Abesteledh, apostles: which pronunciation was more anciently expressed by t; as, Gŷraget, wives, for Gŷragedh. It is at present changed into es according to their writing, but into ez according to their pronunciation. So that it seems but a sort of French or modern English plural; as, Bestez, beasts; Koles, coals; Romes, rooms; Gŷlles, gulls; Pyfgez, fish; Panez, parjumps; Zilliez, eels, or congers; Lahez, laws; Benenez, women; † Flexez, children.

It is not material to distinguish this plural from that terminating in az; as, Kenkraz, crabs; Bozîaz, fingers: or in yz, as, Battyz, staves; Fouyz, dens: or in oz, as, Kappioz, caps; Terroz, lands: for I find they wrote indifferently, Bestez, or Bestaz, beasts; Pŷskez, or Pŷf-gaz, fish; Lozouez, or Lŷzyuyz, herbs; and Plankez, Plankyz, or Plenkoz, boards. And as the termination ez comes nearer the old edb, and agrees with the nominative plural of the third declension in the Latin, the other three (which occur but seldom) seem erroneous orthography and might be omitted.

The fifth may be called the mutable plural, for it is not distinguishable from the singular, as the other four, by any additional termination, but by the change of one vowel either for another, or for a diphthong; or else of one diphthong into another: as, Sanz, a saint, pl. Seinz; Danz, a tooth, Deinz; Marh, a horse, Merh; Yâr, a ben, Yêr; Mab, a son, † Meib; Mên, a stone, Mein; Trûz, a foot, Treiz; Bredar, a brother, Breder; Manek, a glove, Menik; Davaz, a sheep, Devez; Gavar, a goat, Gever.

Gever. Nor does this declension only not increase in the plural, but even sometimes decreases; as, Delen, a leaf, pl. Deil; Guedhan, a tree, Gueidh, &c.—Other plurals do also sometimes change the vowel; as, For' [+ Fordh] a way, pl. Fûrû, and + Fýrdhû; Kûz, a wood, pl. Kozou; Guâz, a mean fellow, Guëñion: but they are nevertheless distinguished by their termination.

In this fifth plural or declension (if we may so call it) the British seems to recede from the Latin, and to come near the Teutonic: for it is a rule in the modern German that a, o, and u in the singular, are changed into ö, ü, and au, or eu in the plural.

All the plurals are reducible to these five—but we find some nouns have two declensions: for we read Deuon and Deuou, Gods; Epskobon, and Epskobou, bishops; Flehez, and Flehezou, children; + Deil, Delyou, and Delkiou, leaves; Terroz, and Tirriou, lands; Enezyz, and Enezou, islands—Others have no plural; as, An Drenzhez, the Trinity; Kÿzaleth, peace: and some no singular; as, Empynion, and Impinion, the brains; Kosgar, lads, boys; Teuolgou, darkness; Lozou, ashes; Meginou, a bellows; and Guedzou, a pair of sheers.

The diminutives (which ought to have been taken notice of above, among the terminations) change commonly their first vowel, and end in ig; as, Temmig, a small fragment, from Tam, a morsel; and Fleheffig, a little child, from Flo' and Flehez.

This termination ig answers to the Latin —iculus, and —ecula in Verficulus, Vulpecula, &c. as divers of their nouns subst. in l, if polysyllables, do to —ullus, —ellus, or —ella, &c. as, Padal, a pan; + Kollel, a knife; and + Kygol, a hood; from Patella, Cultellus, and Cucullus. Nor need we exclude several others from being of the same class of diminutives though not immediately derived from the Latin; as, Brethyl [a mackerel] from Brith, streaked, party-coloured: q. d. Lat. Variolus, or Variogatula.

Adjectives of the comparative degree, terminated formerly in ax: as, + Pellax, further off; Tekax, more fair: and that termination, though the x be now discontinued, should yet be written either ab or a' to shew it's alteration; as, Huëkah, sweeter; Huerua', more bitter.

The superlative ends in a; as, Guëla, the best; Hakra, the most deformed; Kalatsha, the hardest.

There are in the Cornish, as in other languages, some irregular comparisons; as, Mâz, good; Guel, better; Guëla, best; Drok, bad; Gueath, worse; Dròka, and Guetha, the worst: Brez, great; Moy, bigger; Moya, and + Moixa, greatest, biggest: Bian, small; Le, less; Leiha, least: Ogoz, near; Nêz, nearer; Nêsa, the next.

Of the ordinal nouns of number, two or three (according to the present pronunciation) end in a, viz. Kenza, the first;

first; Tridzha, the third; Pazqera, the fourth, but the others in az; as, Pempaz; the fifth; Hueffaz, the sixth; Seithaz, the seventh; Ethaz, the eighth; Nahqaz, the ninth; Dekfaz, the tenth. The termination of these nouns was formerly ath, which in Iganqvath [the twentieth] is still retained.

The gender of adjectives is not now so constantly distinguished as formerly, when the vowel y in the masculine was almost without exception changed to e in the feminine, as in some examples it is yet; as, Gwyn, m. g. guen, f. white; Melyn, m. melen, [or velen] f. yellow.

Another distinction of the gender of adjectives is, that words, beginning with mutes, either change their initial into a softer letter, or else lose it, viz. B is changed into v consonant, d into dh, k into g, m to v consonant, p to b, t to d, and g, as it hath no softer letter of it's class, is omitted: all which we find by these examples, which hold in general; unless the adjective be placed before it's substantive, and the particle an omitted.

B—V; Dên brez, a great man; Ben-nen vraz, a big woman.

D—dh; Marh dâl, a blind horse; Kazek dhâl, a blind mare.

M—V; Guâz medho, a drunken fellow; Hoh vedho, a drunken sow.

P—B; Gûr Prederys, a careful husband; Gurêk brederyz, a diligent wife.

T—D; Mâu têt, a comely youth; Mez dêg, a fair maid.

G— omitted; Dedh glêb, a wet day; Keqar 'lêb, wet weather.

But if the adjective be placed before it's substantive, and the verb Sum interposed, it then retains it's primary initial; as, Dâl yu an gazak-na [Not Dhal yu an gazak-na] that mare is blind. So Brez yu an venen-na; Prederyz eü an urêg-na; Medho yu an ho-'na, &c.

I said when the verb Sum is interposed; for if there be no such verb put between the adjective and it's substantive and the particle an premised, the initial letter is then changed, as before; as, An vraz venen-na, that big woman. But this variation of gender is required only in the singular number.

I have observed no other distinction of gender in the Cornish, excepting that Trei [tbree] is in the feminine, Tair; as, Tair delkian, three leaves; Tair bledhan, three years.

As to case, there is not any such variation of adjectives in the present Cornish, nor do we find any in the oldest British.

The plural of adjectives, though it be now almost wholly disused, terminated formerly in ion, and also changed sometimes the vowel, and softened the mute; as, Dên klâu, a sick man, pl. Dÿnion kle-vion; Huedhel gûak, a false story, pl. Huitlou [or Huidhlou] gouïgion; Gu-rêk rek vohozhak, a poor woman, pl. Gura-gedh vohofugion.

There being no variation of cases, the only concord we find requisite of the adjective and substantive, is in the gender and number; as, Hor' diu, a black ram; Davaz dhiu, a black sheep; pl. Hÿrroz dyon, black rams. Nor are we to regard the gender but only as above-said, in the singular. And as to number, the plural termination of adjectives, though it occur often in writings, is now, in imitation of the English language, almost wholly laid aside.

One singularity of the British language, and an exception of this concord, is, that the nouns of number require no plural in their substantives annexed. For in the Cornish they say, ydn [or yn] Marh, one horse; and Kanz marh, [not Kanz merh] a hundred horses. So Ma huî biuh dhodho, dêau marh, ha trei Kanz ledn davaz; he has six cows, two horses, and three hundred sheep.—

Nor is it otherwise in the Armoric and Welsh, saving that in the Northern Welsh they commonly avoid it, by placing the substantive in the genitive case plural; as, Mae idho ev faith o veibion a xuex o verxed, he hath seven sons and three daughters; and that often in old Welsh manuscripts the substantive plural is made use of as in other languages; as, Trî dÿnyon, three men; Pym' meib, and Pym' meibyon, five sons.

The noun Lîaz [many] admits of the same exception; as, Lîaz termen, many times; Lîaz dern, many hands. Generally speaking, in the Cornish and other British dialects, the substantive is placed before its adjective; as, Dên da, vir bonus; but in the cardinal numerals, the pronouns possessive and the words Lîaz, many; Ken, other; Nep, any, some; Kenifer, each, and such like, the contrary obtains.

THE main difficulty in the pronouns is, that besides their separate use, as in other languages, those which are called the personal and possessive, are always entangled with the prepositions, and the conjunction Ha, and; (as also A, batb;) The preposition and pronoun, or conjunction and pronoun making but one word. Nor is this peculiar to the Cornish: For (not to mention Mecum, &c. in the Latin) it obtains also in the Armoric and Welsh; and is no less obvious in that ancient dialect of the British, we find still preserved in the Highland Scottish or Irish. An enumeration of the pronouns may render this singularity less intricate.

PRONOUNS PERSONAL.

Mi, and Me, I; Minne, I also; Vi, and evî, of me; Dho vi dhém, dhym, dhebm, dhymmo, dhymmo vî, orthiv, to me; Am, me batb; as, Neb am guryk, be who batb created me; Dredhev, by me; A yuhav, above me; A hanav, and dhortam, from me; Tanov, under me; genev, [and gen y vi] with me.—Nei and † Ni, we; also, of us; Agan honan, ourselves, of ourselves; Dhyn, dhynni, and orthin, to us, for us, unto us; Ragon nyi, for us, before us; Rybbon, and rebbon, by or near unto us; Trethou, betwixt us; Uarnan, upon us; Ynnon, in us; A hanen, from us; genen, and genen nyi, with us.

PRONOUNS RELATIVE AND THEIR DERIVATIVES, &c.

Neb, and nep, who, he that; An neb am g'rȳk, he who hath created me; Heruedh nep, in respect of whom; also some, or a certain; In nep le, in some place.—Nebyn, some one.

† Neppeth, nēpyth, and † nebaz, something, somewhat; Piȳa bennak, whosoever; Pandra bennak, and pepȳnnag ol, whatsoever; Ketep, every; Kȳnifar, each; Kȳnifar ol, all, every one, as many as there are of them; Pebs Kȳnifar uȳnyn, idem.—Pȳb, and Peb, all, each; † Pyb hehen, every one; Travêth, any thing.—Bêth, or veth, has always a negative particle subjoined, to make it signify none; as, Ni er dên vêth, no man at all knows; Nag ez triȳath vêth dho vi, I do not at all pity.

PRONOUNS INTERROGATIVE.

Piȳa? Who? Piȳa yȳ an dēnna? Who is that man?

Pa? What?

Pandra? Which thing? q. d. Pa an dra?

Panyn? Whether of them? q. d. Pa an ȳn?

Dry? What? Dry vedo huî ȝîl? What will you?

PRONOUNS DEMONSTRATIVE.

Hem, and hemma, this; An remma, [q. d. an re'hemma] these.—Note, that ma added to the termination of nouns, and signifying this; as, An byzma, this world; An ūlazma, this country, &c. is an abbreviation of Omma, [here] and may be disjoined from the noun by a hyphen; as, An blyven-ma, this pen; An lebar-ma, this book.

Hen, hena, and henna, that; whence na added to nouns; as, An mâu-na, that boy; A guâz-na, that fellow; En kûz-na, in that wood; En ūr-na, then, at that hour; Hedda, [that, that same there] is a late corruption of Hedna, as that was of henna. Hodda [that there] from Honna, is of the feminine gender; as, Eȳ hodda ȝyz hôr hȳci? Is that your sister?

An renna, those; Aral, another; Erel, others.

The pronoun personal of the accusative case, is generally placed before the verb; as, De [or dho] ýz Kridzhe, to believe you; Mi vedn gyz guelaz arta gýdhihuar, I'll see you again in the evening; De ge guithe, to keep them; Ne el e ge dibre, he cannot eat them; E † vedn gyz gil saŷ, it will cure you; Na e 'reuh berna, do not buy it; De e doula en kledh, to cast him into a ditch; Mi vedn gyz pardýna huei, I'll pardon you.

Two pronouns possessive are frequently joined with the substantive, the one being placed before and the other after; as, Dhe a breder vî, to my brother; gyz levar huei, your book; † Ou map evi, my son; gen kosgar nei, our boys;

Hýrliau yu gen guare nýi, urling is our sport.

The pronouns personal are also often doubled, sometimes that the expression may be the more emphatical, and sometimes unnecessarily; as, Orthin nî, to us; Ragon nei, for us; Dheuh huei, unto you; where nî, nei, and huei, might have been omitted.

The pronoun relative is, as sometimes in English, frequently omitted: as, Mi 'rig guelaz an Karnou idzha an gullez ha'n idhen môr aral kîl ý ge neitho, I saw the rocks [on which] the gulls and other sea birds make their nests; An lýzûan bían gen i'ar nedhez, ez a tivi en an haloŷ nei, ez kreiez Plêth Maria, the small plant with the twisted stalk [which] grows on our hills, is called Plêth Maria.

C H A P. V.

O F T H E V E R B.

THERE are five regular infinitives or primary terminations of verbs, in the Cornish.

The first infinitive ends in a; as, Argila, to recoil; Beua, to live; Dalla, to make blind; Eva, to drink; Fyſta, to thresh; Gueſga, to wear; Hueſtha, to blow; Ira, to anoint; Krenna, to tremble; Ladha, to kill; Methia, to nurse; Nedha, to spin; Ouna, to fear; Perna, to buy; Ranna, to share or divide; Sedha, to sit; Tivia, to grow; Zalla, to salt.

This infinitive remains so in the present Armoric; but in an old Vocabulary printed at Paris, by Yvon Quillivere, 1521, I find it terminates in aff; as, Ieugaff, to yoke or couple; Rhiſglaff, to slide; Elvennaſſ, to sparkle; Damnaſſ, to condemn; Englennaſſ, to stick or adhere unto.

Of the verbs that are of this infinitive in the Cornish, the greatest part end in o or y in the Welsh; as, Corn. Kýhydha, to betray, W. Kýhydho; Tefigia, to tire, W. Dýffýgio; Danta, to bite, W. Deintio; Kribia, to card, W. Kribo; Zona, to charm, W. Suyno; Kuſga, to sleep, Kýſgy; Diſlonka, to swallow, Dadlŷnky; Kana, to sing, Kany; Privia, to bleat, Brevy. Some exceptions there are; as, Beua, W. Býu, Eva, ýved; † Guruedha, Goruedh; Ladha, Lhâdh; and Sedha, eistedh; but not very many.

The second infinitive ends in i, or y, and is common to the Cornish with the Armoric Britons, and the Welsh: for our terminating so many of them in u, as, Karu, to love, &c. makes no exception, u being but equivalent to y, and the pronunciation being regarded here, not the orthography.

The letter y differing so very little from i, especially in the termination of words of more than one syllable, may be in this infinitive spared; and such words written constantly with an i; as, Deſki, (not deſky) to learn; Ageri, to open; Sinzhi, to hold; ŷýſenzhi, to lay; Gulhi, to wash; Leſki, to burn; Terhi, to break; Huari, to play; Kelli, to loose; Prediri, to meditate or think upon; Tebri, and Dibri, to eat; Gorthybi [and Gorthebi] to answer; Strihui, to sneeze; Kýlŷui, to lighten.

The third, as commonly written in the Cornish MSS. ends in s; but according to pronunciation, all such words should be written with a z; as, Miraz, to look; Guelaz, to see; Bez, to be; Dez, to come; Maz, to go; Meliaz, to grind; Yuhellaz, [† yzellaz] to ascend; Kýmeraz, to take; Gollyaz, and † Koliaz, to watch; watch; Kauaz, to have; Araz, to plow; Kryhiáz, to neigh as a horse; Klyucz, to bear; † Monez, to go; Kortez, to stay or tarry; † Kerhez, to fetch; and sometimes Guelez, to see; and † Mirez, to look.

This infinitive ended formerly in t, as it does yet in divers words in Wales, but much more in Bas Bretagne; as, Brafaat, to grow big; Buhanecaat, to lessen; Kaerat, to adorn or beautify; Karet, to love; Kassaat, to hate; xoantaat, to desire; Hiraat, to lengthen; Beraat, to abridge; Arat, to plow; Falxat, to mow, &c.

The fourth regular infinitive ends in l; as, Merual [† Murual] to die; Teulel, or tyulel, to cast; Kÿneual, to dine; Leverel, to speak; † Gurythyl, to make; Teuel, to be silent; † Lemmel, † lebmal, to leap; Kÿntl, to gather; Sevel, to stand.

Kÿnnilh and Sevilh, are the words in the Welsh, answering to this Kÿntl and Sevel; but we have not any termination in l, though it be very common in the Armoric; as, Krîal, to cry; Defial, to defy; Derxel, to hold; Drafqual, to crack; Harthal, to bark; Henuel, to name; Menel, to tarry; Rinçal, to cleanse; Teurl, to throw or cast, to hurl; Tripal, to dance; Trufial, to make a noise; Kleuel, to be sick; Binigal, to bless; Shemel, to tarry; Brihadal, to embrace; Farçal, to mock; Dizrevel, to relate or rebearse.

The fifth may be called the Teutonic infinitive, as ending in n, but there are but few verbs of this termination in the Cornish. Danin, is to send; Govyn, and gafen, to ask; Huerhîn, to laugh; and † Ten, or tûn, to bring or carry: and in the Armoric, Espern, is to spare, and Dizremen, to traverse or pass to and again.

These five are the primary or Dictionary terminations of almost all verbs in the Cornish, but I find that sometimes the same verb has two or three of these infinitives; as, † Yskyn, and Eskÿuna, to mount or ascend; Kîth and Kitha, to bide; and Kauz, † Keuza and Keuzel, to talk.

The infinitive mood is (as in the other dialects of the British) variously applied, and of frequent use in the Cornish: for it sometimes serves as a substantive as in the Latin, Velle suum cuique est, &c. and by the help of the particle a [or † ou] before it, it supplies the room of the particle of the present tense; as, A kufga, sleeping; A prediri, studying; Ou kolyaz, watching; † Ou Sevel, standing; A gofen, asking.

The other particles of the infinitive mood are De do dhe or dho, to; ÿ, to; as, ÿ sedha, to sit, and rag, or rhag, for to; rag mez, for to go.

OF THE AUXILIARY VERBS.

Bez, or † bos, to be; Gurithil, to do; and Menny, to will.

The verbs Bez, to be; and Gureiz, g'rithil, or gîl, [to do or to make] being necessary auxiliaries in the forming of verbs; we shall begin with them.

Ov,

Ov, essav and + essam, I am; Oz, assaz and + ydhoz, thou art; Ma, yu, ez yfy, + otte and + ydzhi, he is; Oni and affon, we are; Oh, + oux and + yzoux, ye are; Ynz, monz and ymonz, they are.

Ezen, I was; Ezzez, thou art; O, be was; Oezyn, we were; Oezy', ye were; Oezenz, they were.

Bÿm and me a vÿe, I have been; Beste, [or Te a veste] thou hast been; Be, be bath been; Byan, or ni vyan, we have been; Byoh, and huêl a vÿoh, ye have been; Byonz, they have been.

Beazen, [or me + veadzhen] I had been; Beazez, thou hadst been; Beaze, be had been; Beazen, we had been; Beazeh, be had been; Beazenz, they had been.

Bedhav, I will be; Bedhi, thou wilt be; Bÿdh, be will be; Bedhon, we will be; Bedhoh, ye will be; Bedhanz, they will [or shall] be.

Bedh, and bez, be thou; Bedhez, [Boez and bÿz] let him be; Bedhon, let us be; Bedhoh, bé ye; Bedhenz, let them be.

Bedhon, and bein, I should be; Bedhiz, and beiz, thou shouldst be; Bo, be may be; Bedhe, [and Beze] be should be; Bedhen, and Bezen, we should be; Beze, + Beux, + Bedhex, and + Bezex, ye should be; Bedhynz, bezenz and bênz, they should be.

+ Bones, bôz [or according to the modern pronunciation, Baz] Dhe baz and y vez, to be; Rag bez, for being; for to be.

The passive voice, or, as it may be otherwise called, the impersonal of this verb, had an infinitive or participle of the present tense joined with it; as, Yz eziz a kîl huêl ymina, I, thou, we, ye, or they work here, viz. q. d. Working is performed here, whether by me, thee, him or them, &c.

Note, that Ma or ymâ [is] and ymônz [they are] must be always used narratively, and never interrogatively, nor negatively; and that they must be always placed before their nominative; but eü or yu, yzi [or + ydzhi] and + asens or + ydzhenz, either way and in either place; as, Yma 'n leva ymm, the book is here; and not An levar ma ymma; Ev eü dên dâ, or dêu dâ eü, he is a good man; Yu an vez-na gÿz hòr? Is that maid your sister? + Ydzhi 'gÿz tâz bêu? Is your father living?

The present tense of the other verbs, is in the Welsh generally expressed by this verb substantive, and a participle of the present tense; as, Yr yduyv yn 'fkrivenny, I am writing, for I write; but in the Cornish, as in the English, by the following verb Gûreiz, gÿl or grythil, to do; as, Dera vi laviria, I do labour: though they commonly express the third person by the verb substantive ymâ and ymônz; and sometimes the others.

Gerehâv vi, mÿ urchâv, + dera vi, and gera vi, I do; Gurei, Tî urei, and + therâ tshî a gureiz, thou doest; Gura ev, and ev a ıra, he does; G'raun, and ni 'raun, we do; + Gureox [and gureuh]

or

huî a 'ureoh, ye do; Gurânz, and † dzhyî a urân, they do.

Gurig me, me re urig, and me a 'urig, I did or have done; Gurýffys, Ti 'ueris, Ty 'urig, and Ty re 'urig, thou hast done; Gurâz, ev a 'uraz, ev a 'ureiz, and ev a 'rig, he has done; Gureithon, and ni a 'ureithon, we have done; Gureithoh, or huî a 'ureitho, ye have done; Gureithonz, and † gzhÿi a 'ureithon, they have done.

Mi a 'urýffen, I bad done; Ty a 'urýfsez, thou hast done; Ev a 'ressa, be bad done; Nî a 'ureffen, we bad done; Huî a 'ureffeh, ye bad done; Gureffenz, they bad done.

Gurâv, and gurêhav vi, or mi a 'urehav, mi a 'urav, and mi 'râ, I shall or will do; Mî vyn, or † vedn gurythyl, I will do; Ti a 'urei, thou wilt do; Ev a 'ura, be will do; Guraun ni 'uraun, and ni 'urên, we shall do; † Gureux, or huî a 'ureuh, ye shall do; Gurânz, and † dzhyî a 'rân, they shall do.

Pan 'urvffo [and pan huarfo] when I shall do; Pan 'urylli, and pan 'uryffys, when thou shalt do; Pan 'uryllif, and pan 'urrello, when ye shall do; Pan 'urellon, when we shall do; Pan 'urelloh, when ye shall do; Pan 'urellon, when they shall do.

Gurâ, do thou; Gurêth, and gurez, let him do; Guraun, let us do; Gureuh, [and gureus] do ye; Guraenz, let them do.

Dhe 'ureiz, dhe 'urithil, dhe 'il and dhe huîl, to do or make.

Another auxiliary verb in the Cornish, is Menni, [or † mÿnni] to will; which they use also as in the English, before the future tense of the indicative mood, and as would in the optative, &c.

Mennav, [and me in a ven] I will; Menni, or ti a venni, thou wilt; Men, or &c. be will; Mennon, we will; Mennoh, ye will; Mennan, and —anz, they will.

Mennen, I would or was willing; Mennyz, thou wouldst or wert willing; Mennaz, be would; Mennen, we would; Mennch, ye would; Mennenz, they would.

Menzhon, I would or had been willing; Menzhez, thou wouldst or hadst been willing; Menzhe, be would or had been willing; Menzhen, we would or had been willing; Menzheh, ye would or had been willing; Menzhenz, they would, &c.

Mennav, or me a ven, I will; Menni, Mennith, and Menta, thou wilt; [Mar menta, if thou wilt] Myn men, menno, and mynno, be will; [Nep a vynno, be that will] Mennon, we will; Mennoh, ye will; Mennanz, they will.

This verb is of late much altered by that common corruption already mentioned, the inserting d before, and sometimes after, n, &c. For they now say, Mî vedn, I will; Tshî vedn, thou wilt; and E vedn, nei vedn, hui vedn, ei vedn; and also Madam or me vadam, I will; Mendzhe vi, I would; Mendzhae, be would; and Meddonz, they will.

THE FORMING OF A REGULAR VERB ACTIVE.

Guelav, mî uêl, + Dera vi guelez, and oyv a guelez, I see; Gueli Ti uêl Ti oiz a guelez, and + therâ tshî a guelez, thou seest; Guêl, ev a uêl, and mae a guelez, he sees; Guelon, nî a uelon, + Thera nî a guelez, and nî idzhin a guelez, we see; Gueloh, huî ueloh huî odzhi' a guelez, and + therâ huî guelez, ye see; Guelanz, &c. they see.

Mi 'urîg guelez, or ryguelez, I did see; Ti riguelez, thou didst see; Ev a ryguelez, he did see; Nî riguelaz, we did see; Huî 'ryg guelaz, ye did see; An dzhyî 'ryg guelaz, they did see.

Gueleiz, or mi a ueleiz, I have seen; + Guelyst Ti a ueleist, or Ti a uelyz, thou hast seen; Guelyz, or eu a 'uelyz, he hath seen; Guellen, guelson, or nî a + 'uel-san, we have seen; Guelfoh, or huî a uel-so', ye have seen; Guelzonz, or an dzÿi a + uelzon, they have seen.

Guelzen, or mî a uelzen, I had seen; Guelzez, thou badst seen; Guelze, he had seen; Guelzen, we had seen; Huî a uelse', ye had seen; Guelzenz, and Guelazzenz, they had seen.

Guelav, and me a uelav, I will see; Ti a uyl, or Ti a ueli, thou wilt see; Guêl, or ev a uyl, uêl, or uela, he will see; Guelun, we will see; Guelo', ye will see; Guelanz, they will see.—So, Mi a vedn guelez, I will see; Ti a ven guelez, &c. Guel, or gurâ uelez, see thou; Guelez e, let him see; Guelon, let us see;

Gueleuh, or gureuh uelez, see ye; Guelenz, let them see.

Mai huellam, that I may see; Mai huellaz, that thou mayest see; Mai huello, that he may see; Mai huellan, that we may see; Mai huelloh, that ye may see; Mai huellanz, that they may see.

Me venzhon guelez, or guelaz, I would see; Ti venzhez guelez, thou wouldst see; Ev venzhe guelez, he would see; Menzhen guelez, we would see; Menzheh guelez, ye would see; Menzhenz uelez, they would see.

+ Mar guylfym, if I shall see; Mar guylfydh, if thou shalt see; Mar guylfy e, if he shall see; Mar guylfon, if we shall see; Mar guelfo, if ye shall see; Mar guylfynz, if they shall see.

De uelez, or dho uêlaz, to see.

From the forming of this verb, with which the generality of others agree, we may observe,

First, That the verbs have derived their distinction of persons originally from the pronouns, as we find yet some footsteps of them in their termination. For the last letter in Guelav [I see] is taken from vi, I; the last of Guelon [we see] from ni, we; Of + Guelox, and Gueloh, ye see; from + huî and + huî, ye; and in Guelanz, the third person plural, the pronoun is almost wholly retained for anz, onz, or oinz, is but the same with the Welsh uynt, or huint, they.

G

Secondly.

Secondly. That every verb beginning with a G retains its initials; first, when the pronoun is not expressed: as, Guerhav an marhna, I will sell that horse: secondly, when it is placed before the nominative case; as, Guerh an Dên an marh-na, the man will sell that horse: and thirdly, when formed with an auxiliary verb; as, Ema 'n dên a guerhÿ an marh, the man is selling the horse; E 'ryg guerhÿ, he did sell; Mi ven [or mi t vedn] guerhi, I will sell: but where the pronoun or other nominative case, is placed immediately before the verb, the initial G is always lost, and that whether the particle [a] be interposed or omitted: as, Mî a uêl, or mî uêl, I see. I said immediately, because if ai be interposed instead of a, the G remains; as, Mî ai guerha, I will sell it.

Also any verb beginning with any other mute retains its initial after the same manner; but changes it for a softer letter of the same class, when the nominative case comes before the verb; as, Pernav, I will buy; but Mî a bernav, and not Mî a pernav. And so (as is already observed of the adjectives) B is constantly changed for V consonant, D for db, K for g, M for V consonant, P for b, and T for d.

Thirdly. That in strictness there is no present tense of the indicative mood, the time present being expressed by an auxiliary verb, and either the infinitive mood or a participle of the present tense; saying, I do work, or I am working, for I work: but nevertheless, the auxiliary is often omitted, and then the future tense supplies the use of the present; for Ev a gleu, is he bears, as well as he will bear.

Fourthly. The radix, or most simple termination of the verb, is most commonly the third person singular of the future tense of the indicative mood, or else (which is generally the same) the second person singular of the imperative: as, Gura, do thou; Kouz, speake thou; Ro, give; Ki, go; Gàz, quit, or leave; Gav, forgive, &c. though they sometimes augment such verbs by the addition of an a or i: for they say, Govyn, ask thou, or Govÿnna; Galu, call, or Galua; Fÿstin, hasten, or fÿstina; Gor, put, or Gori, &c.

THE FORMING OF A VERB PASSIVE.

A verb passive is but a sort of impersonal, as having but one termination in a tense, and that word is added to any person of either number.

The present tense is formed as the active, by the verb, substantive and participle.

Ez ydzhiz am henual, I am named or called; Ez ydzhiz [+ yzhiz] ath henual, thou art called; Ez t yzhis ai henual, he is called; Ez yzhiz a'n henual, we are called; Ez yzhiz a o'h henual, ye are called; Ez yzhiz ai henual, they are called. Henuyz vî, I was called; Henuyz dî, thou wert called; Henuyz ev, he was called; Henuyz nî, we were called; Henuyz, Henūyz hui, ye were called; An dzhÿi a henūyz, they were called.

Or else by placing the pronoun before the verb; as, Mi a henūyz, Ti a henūyz, &c. or by the participle ev, or 've, premised; as, Ve a'm henūyz, or ve a'm henūyz i, ve a'th henūyz, or ve ath henūyz dî, ve a'i henūyz ev, ve a'n henūyz nî, &c.

Henūaffiz vi, I had been called; Henūaffis di, [+dzhî] thou hadst been called; Henūaffiz ev, he had been called, &c. Henūir vî, I shall be called; Henūir di, thou shalt be called, &c.

And this is also used as well as in the verb active for the present tense.

Henūer vî, let me be named; Henūer di, be thou named; Henūer e, Henūer nî, Henūer huî, Henūer + hoi, or +an dzhÿi.

THE FORMING OF SOME IRREGULAR AND DEFECTIVE VERBS.

Menz, or +mez, to go; âv, Mi â, mî âv, or oiv a mez, I go or am going; Ti ez a mez, thou goest; Ma ev a mez, be goes; Ez ÿdzhin nÿi a mez, we go, &c. Ethym me a ethim, or me 'ryg mez, I went; Ti a ethez, thou wentst; Ev a êth, be went; Mi âv, mî â, or mî ven, or vedn, mez, I will go; Ti ei, and tî a, thou wilt go; Ev â, or e ven mez, be will go; Ni aun, or nî vennon maz, we will go; Huî a euh', ye shall go; An zhÿi ânz, or vennon mez, they will go. Ke and Kî, go thou; Eu', or +euz, go ye; ênz, let them go.

Tez, Dez, and +dyvoz, to come; Ezhov, ÿdzhov, or oiv daz, I come; Ti dhiue, thou comest; Ozoz tez, thou comest; E ma a tez, be comes; Nî a ÿdzhin tez, we come; Huî a odzho' tez, ye come; E-mânz daz, they come. Tôn, [or tan] and dôñ, to bring or carry. Oyv, odziv, or dera mi tôn, I carry; Thera tzhî a tôn, thou carriest, &c. Mî a dhÿg, or mî a 'ryg tôn, I carried; Ti a dhÿgyz, thou didst carry; Ev a dhyg, be did carry; Nyi 'rygon den, we did carry; Huî a 'rago' den, ye did carry; An dzhÿi a 'ryganz den, they did carry. Mî ven den, and me a dhÿgav, I will carry, &c. Dôg, and doga, bring thou; Degez, let him bring; Dezen, or Dezin, let us bring; Dezynz, let them bring; May 'ury me dhôn, that I did bring; Mai tokko, that he may bring.

Drei, to bear or bring; Ev a dhrôz, be brought; Huî re dhrôz, ye have brought; Mî a dhora, I will bring; Diô, bring thou; Dreuh, bring ye.

Azuen, to know; Mi a azuan, [† adzhuan] and mî 'ra adzhuan, I know; Thera tshi a adzhuan, &c. Mî Azuonfyz, I knew.

Guodhaz, [or † Kodhav] to know; Guon mi a uon, or mî a uer, I know; Ti a uar, or Ti uôr, thou knowest; Ev a ûr, and uyr, he knoweth; Ni a uydhen, and uodhen, we know; Guedhoh, or huî a uedhoh, ye. know; Guedhanz, they know. Guedhun, or mî a uydhun, I knew; Ti a uydhyz, thou didst know; Ev a uyrheuyz, he did know; Ni a uedhyn, we did know; Guydheh, or —eh hui a uydh, ye did know; Guydhanz, and gueianz, they did know; Guodhav, or me a ven guodhaz, I will know; Guidhi, or Ti a uydhy; thou shalt know; Ev a uÿr, he will know, &c. Mai guothfo ev, that he may know.

Keuaz, to have or obtain; Oiv a Kauaz, ema dho vi, or ema zennev, I have; Oiz a keuaz ema dhyz, or ema zennez, thou hast, &c.

Me a gavaž, gauaz, or mi 'rig gauaz, I bad; Ti rig gevaz, thou badst, &c. Mi ven, or vyn geuaz, I will have; Ti a zeffi, and Ti a zevyth, thou shalt have; Ev a zêf, he shall have; Ni a gân, we shall have; Huî a zeuh, ye shall have; An dzhÿi a gânz, they shall have.

Kally, or Gally, to be able.

Gallav, or mi allav, I may or can; Ti a îl, thou canst; Ev a alla, he can;

Ni illi, he cannot; Gÿllyn, and nî a yllin, we can; Huî eiloh, ye can; Gallanz, they can.

Gallez, or mî a allez, I could or was able; Gallez Ti, thou couldst; Galle, he could, &c.—The future as the present tense.

Mai hilliv, that I may; Mai hyllin, that we may. Mar kallen, if I could; Mar kulste, if thou couldst; Ti a alseft, thou mightst; Ev a alse, he might; Ni a elfin, we might; Huî a elfih, ye might; An dzhÿi a alsenz, they might.

Beu, to live, is sometimes written beua; but has no other variation, and its most common use is as an adjective.

Myruy, myruel, and maruel, to dye; Ev a verou, and ev a ven vyru, he will dye; Pan varuo, when he shall dye.

Medhav, Lat. Inquam, say I; Medhyz, sayst thou; Medh e, says he; Medhon, say we; Medhoh, say ye; Medhanz, say they.

Delev, Delon, or mi a dhelon, I ought; Deliz, or Ti a dheli, thou oughtest; Dele, or ev a dhÿle, he ought; Delen, we ought; Deleh, [or † hÿei dâl] ye ought; Delenz, they ought. Mai dhÿllyn, that I ought or should. And the use of this verb is also often supplied by Reiz, [necessity] as, Reiz yu dhÿmmo [or † dhebm] I must; Reiz ô dhyz, thou wert obliged; Biz reiz dhodho, he will be obliged, &c.

C H A P. VI.

OF THE PARTICIPLE.

THERE being no participle of the present tense in the Cornish, its use is supplied (as is already observed) by the infinitive mood with the particle a prefixed: as, A huerhin, laughing; A vòla, weeping; A grizla, grinning; A Striui, sneezing; A Krýhiaz, neighing; A pedhigla, bellowing; A privia, bleating; A tebry, eating; A Korqedha, lying; A Kerdhez, going, &c.

Instead of this particle [a] which is according to the modern pronunciation, in the manuscripts of any standing we find ou; as, Ou leski, burning; Ou Kortez, staying; Ou monez, going; Ou reze, running; Ou sevel, standing; Ou tún, carrying. When two or more participles come together, the a or ou is requisite only before the first; as, 'mâ n dzhÿi a rostita ha prýdzhan, they are roasting and boiling; Patl ýzhi a kÿlÿui ha trenna! bow it thunders and lightens!

In common speaking, the particle is sometimes omitted; as, Huei 'ra kavaz an guâz brez, zigir-na kufga uer an gërha, you will find that great lazy fellow sleeping on the bay.

The participle of the preterperfect tense, is formed from the radix or second person singular of the imperative mood, by making yz it's termination, and extenuating most commonly the penultimate vowel, viz. The changing a, o and u, into e or i; and e into i or y: as we find by the following examples.

a—e. Lâdh, kill thou; Ledhyz, slain; Gaz, quit or forsake; zezyz, forsaken; Kofgaza, shade or defend; Kofzezyz, shaded; Govarna, govern; Governyz, governed.

a—e, or i. Galu, call; zeeluyz, and gilyz, called; Mâg, breed; Mezyz, and mizyz, bred; Guân, pierce; Guenyz, and guinyz, pierced; Gâv, forgive; zevyz, and zivyz, forgiven; Arv, arm; Ervyz, and yrvyz, armed.

o, u—e. Dòg, and dûg, carry; Dègyz, carried; Danvon, send; Danvenyz, sent; Dro, bring; Dreyz, brought; Ro, give; Reiz, given; Tolla, bore; Tellyz, bored, perforated, &c. But Kòlyz, lost; Gorryz, put or set, and Kodhyz [or Kèdhyz] fallen, are excepted.

e—i, or y. Senzha, bold; Sinzhyz, beld; Guorhemmen, command; Guorhemminnyz, commanded; Guerh, sell; Guyrthyz, sold; Henua, name; Hinuyz, named; Nivera, reckon or number; Nevytyz, reckoned; Skrêf, write; Skrifyz, written; though some words occur that retain the e: as, Guelyz, seen; zenyz, born; Hèllhyz, chased; Oberyz, wrought: which yet might perhaps be as well written, Guilyz, zinyz, hilhyz, and oberyz.

I am sensible that the modern pronunciation of the Cornish, does not confirm the termination of this participle's being always in yz: for they generally end it in ez, saying Kreiez, called; Trehez, cut; Miskemerez, mistaken; Dyliez, revenged; Guerhez, sold, &c. and sometimes in az: as, Ledhaz, slain; Kÿrtaz, delayed; Guesgaz, worn; though not seldom, also in yz: as, Devydhyz, quenched; Devedhyz, come; Bidhyz, drowned; Kelmyz, bound; Huedhyz, swoln; but the manuscripts have it with few, if any, exceptions, in ys; which as the British y answers to the Roman u, seems to agree with the Latin us, their termination of the same participle: as, Auditus, visus, derisus, plexus.

In the Welsh dialect, the participle of the present tense is likewise supplied by the infinitive mood, but with the particle yn [in] before it: as, yn Klyued, bearing; yn Gueled, seeing. And the participle of the preterperfect tense ends in edig: as, Dyskedig, learned; Kyffegredig, consecrated; Guynvydedig, blessed; Argraphedig, printed. — But as it makes the words long, it is but seldom heard in speaking, though the use of it be much more tediously supplied by the preposition Guedi [after] and an infinitive mood with the pronoun interposed. So that the Cornish is herein, readier; for they say, Ema 'zÿz, dillaz gurÿz, your cloaths are made: where the Welsh say, Ymae ÿz dilhad guedi i guneythyr.

OF THE ADVERB AND INTERJECTION.

ADVERBS are frequently made out of two words united; as, Ter-guyth, thrice, from Tair, three, and Guêth, a course or turn; Ragdun, least that, from Rag, for, and Oun, fear. And this we find also common in the Latin; as, Quamobrem, quapropter, sæpenumero, propterea; quare quâ re, denuo de novo, pridie priori die, &c. But such words occasioning sometimes the accent in the last syllable, are an exception of the idiom of the British; the accent being generally throughout each dialect in the antepenultima.

The particle en [or yn] placed before an adjective serves to express those adjective-adverbs which in English end in ly; as, En fîr, wisely; En splan, clearly; En 'lannith, cleanly; En lûan, cheerfully, &c.

The adverbs Lÿk and Laur, or laver, [enough] are placed contrary to what we use, after the noun: for where we say Digon o bysgod, [fish enough] they say Pÿsgoz lÿk, and pÿsgoz laver. And Nevra [never] with some such like, require another negative with them, the verb being commonly interposed: as Nî uêl † bithgueth, he will never see.

Adverbs of Affirming. Enuêr [or en uêr] truly; Endhiouzel, and en dhiùgel, certainly, most assuredly.

Of Assembling. Uarbarth, together.

Of Choosing. Kenz, rather; Kenz vel, rather than. † Kynz.

Of Comparison. Mar and mor, as, so; Mar bel, so long, so far; Mar scon, so soon; Mor iuhal, so high; Kÿ mal [or vel] idem. Kÿ guêr vel an guelz, as green as grass; Del, Del alla e, as he can; Della, in della, and in Ketalla, so as, so that; Kara, pokar and pokara, † Kepar del, and Kepar ha, even as, like unto; Maga, as; Maga fîr, as wise; Magatâ, as well; Keffryz, idem. Yn, in; † Yn dan, or yndàn, under; Yuh, above; Yuh an môr, above the sea.

CONJUGATE PREPOSITIONS.

Dez answers to the Latin Re; as, Dazveua, to revive; Dazprena, to redeem.

Di, without; Dibitti, merciless; Dibêh, guiltless; Diouzel, doubtless.

Dyn answers to the conjugate preposition an in the Welsh; as, † Dÿnerxy, [or † Dynêrhy] to greet or salute. W. Anherxy.

Dyz, [or dez] is equivalent to the English dis or un; as, Dizkuedha, and Dizkydha, to discover; Dezkriſſa, to distrust; Diz'il, and dîzurythyl, to undo, to ruin or destroy.

Em, or om, is the same with the Welsh ym; as, Dhe hemladh, and Em-ladha, to fight, W. Ymladh; Emdhal, and Omdhal, to strive, W. Ymdhal.

En is only an intensive particle; as In sometimes in the Latin: Enkledhyz, buried.

Gor is such another expletive, and used as in the Welsh; as, Goruedh, to lie down; Gorfen, or Da uorfenna, to finish.

Ho, or He, is the same with the Welsh Hy, and signifies easily, &c. as, Hogil, feasible; answering to —bilis in the termination of Latin adjectives; as, Hegar, amabilis; Huel, visibilis, &c.

Ket implies an equality, and answers to the Welsh Kyd in Kÿdÿmdeith, or Kydymmeth, &c. Kettoth, or Kettoſt, as soon as; Kettella, so, in such a manner.

Kov, or Kÿv, is of the same signification, and answers to the Latin con, often changing as well as it, the last letter. Kovlenuel; and Collenuel, to fulfil.

Tre agrees with the Latin trans. Tremenez, to traverse, to frequent a place much. W. Tràmuy; † Trenÿdzha, to fly to and again, to fly over; L. Transvolo. Tremor, foreign; Tranlinarinus.

C H A P. X.

SOME PROPERTIES OF PHRASE, WITH SOME NOTES OMITTED IN THE FOREGOING CHAPTERS; AND A SPECIMEN OF THE MODERN CORNISH COLLATED WITH THE WELSH.

HAVING under the several Parts of Speech given some examples of their use and application, there remains little (as far as occurs to my thoughts at present) to be said of their Construction or Syntax. I shall therefore only add some notes of phrase that seem particular, and subjoin a specimen of the Cornish as it is now understood.

Adrô [about] is sometimes used where we say in English on or upon; as, An hevez adrô y zein, the shirt on his back; An lydrou adîô 'z garro, the stockings on your legs; An eîgizou a dro 'z treiz, the shoes on your feet; Anmanak adrô 'z darn, the glove on your hand.

Dv, or dhe, [to] interposed between the noun or pronoun and verb; as, Rhag ouñ hui dho Kedha, po an reu dhe dêrhi, a huei dhe vez bidhis, lest you fall, or the ice break and you be drowned: As if one should say word by word; for fear you to fall, and the ice to break, &c.

Drôg [bad] is used sometimes for grief or sorrow; as, Drôg yu genniv, I am sorry, q. d. Lat. verbatim, Malè se res habet mecum, quòd, &c.

Gurithyl, or gîl, [to do or make] is a word that is variously applied, and seems often redundant in the Cornish; as, Gureuh ouna gyz furu, mend your ways, amend your life; Gureuh vi dhe uelaz, show me, &c.

Guyn properly signifies white; but Guyn agan bîz, is, we are happy, q. d. the world shines upon us.

Mez signifies properly an open field; but avez is also the common word for without; as is likewise amêz in the Armoric, Ymaes in the southern Welsh, and amuigh in the Irish.

Na, ni, and the other negatives, as I have already hinted, are sometimes repeated; as, Rag dout na vedho na muî gytheffiaz dhyu', rhag an dzhedhma, lest there be no more offered you this day; N'ora vi skrefa na muî, I can write no more.

Pen, or † pedn, in the British of all countries signifies an end as well as head. So Kynz pedn zythin, before the week's end: And Pedn vîz, pedn vledhan, &c. Hence we read in Nennius's account of the wonders of Ireland, that a piece of wood put into a lake called Lox 'n eaz would be found in capite anni to be converted partly into stone and partly into iron.

Rhag

Rhag, or rag, for, as also before, is variously used and sometimes pronounced râg. Rhag an dzhêdh, for the whole day; Dÿz yn râg, come forward; E ryg hedhaz râg e vrêh, he stretched forth his arm.

Ran, or + radn, a share or part; Emâ radn a lel, some say.

Toulyz, cast; Toulyz da vez, wasted.

Uar [upon] is applied sometimes to signify by; as, Nag yu uar an hêz, it is not by the length; and sometimes it is otherwise singularly used; as, Thera vî uar 'yz pizi, I desire you.

In the Cornish language (and the same may be said of the British of Wales, and the old Scottish) the verb † Kaffel, † Kauaz, or Kavaz, to have, wants the present tense of the indicative, and has no imperative mood; and therefore they always use the verb substantive and dative case; as, 'Ma dhÿmmo, 'ma + dhebem, or Ema dho vi, I have, as in Lat. est mihi. So, Ema dhodho, he bath; Ema dhÿn nî, we have, &c.

And they make frequent use of the dative case on other occasions: as, † Pÿ gotha dhÿz bez dhyz levar, when you ought to be at your book; Ema huanz dhÿmmo, I desire; Ema kô, dhê vi, I remember.

Some English phrases are also imitated by the Cornish, which would be absurd in the Welsh: such as Mi vedn mezh alêz, I will go abroad, or I will walk forth; as if one should say in Welsh, Mî a vÿnna vÿnd ar lêd; which would not be understood till explained, and then sufficiently ridiculous. So Emâ a kîl err, it does snow; Ema a kîl kez-zar, it does hail, q. d. W. Ymae hî 'n gueythÿr eira, &c.

It seems to be also in imitation of the English, that they place the adjective so often before the substantive, saying nêssa zeithan, the next week; which would be expressed in Welsh ÿr uythnos nêsa.

The verb substantive is not always placed in the Cornish as in Welsh, but often postponed; for they say, Paryz dhê dêrhi yu, it's ready to break, where we say, y mae ÿn barod i dorri, &c.

As to prosody, such as are curious to know the sorts of verse, &c. used by the Britons, are referred to the ingenious Dr. John David Rhys's Cambro Britanica Cymraecævè Linguae Institutiones & Rudimenta: Ad Illustr. Virum Edouardum Stradlingum Equitem, &c. Lond. Fol. 1592, where he has given out of the old Welsh Dunads, (for so, from Donatus, Grammars were formerly called) together with his own observations, a very particular account of the sorts of verse used by the Bards from the sixth century to his own time. And therefore Dr. Davies, the author of the Dictionary and Octavo Grammar, refers his readers to him. Huic Libello (says he) justum Prosodiae Tractatum non destinavimus.—Qui plura cupit, consulat Jo. Dav. Rhesum, &c. Dav. Antiq. Ling. Br. Rudimenta. Lond. Octav. 1621, p. 214. —All the Grammars written before Dr. John David Rhys's were in Welsh; the latest whereof had been printed at Milan, and dedicated to the Earl of Pembroke, by the learned Dr. Griffith Roberts.

Roberts. Of those written before, most copies are anonymous; but some retain the names of their authors: as 1st. Minvyn, of whose time I find no account. 2dly. Ederu Davod-ayr, or Ederu Chrysostomus, who writ about the year 1280. 3dly. Ennian Oifeiriad, or Ennianus Presbyter, his cotemporary. 4thly. David Dhÿ of Hiradhig, in Flintshire, ann. 1340.

The sort of verse I find most common amongst our oldest remains, is that called Englyn Milur in Jo. Dav. Rhÿs's Grammar, p. 184. And as I have (tho' but rarely) heard the same in the shire of Argile in Scotland, and also in Cornwall, I am apt to conclude it one of the most ancient, if not the very oldest sort of verse we ever had; and that it was in this sort of metre the Druids taught their disciples; of whom Cæsar says: Ad hos magnus adolescentium numerus Disciplinæ causa concurrat. — Illo certo anni tempore in finibus Carnutum, quæ regio totius Galliæ media habetur, confidunt, in loco consecrato. Huc omnes undique conveniunt; eorumque judiciis decretisque parent. Disciplina in Britannia reperta atque inde in Galliam translata, esse existimatur. Et nunc qui diligentius eam rem cognoscere volunt, plerumque illo discendi causa proficiscuntur. Druides a bello abesse consueverunt, neque tributa una cum reliquis pendunt: militiæ vacationem omniumque rerum habent immunitatem. Tantis excitati præmiis & suâ sponte multi in Disciplinam conveniunt, & a propinquis parentibusque mittuntur. Magnum ibi numerum versuum ediscere dicuntur. Itaque nonnulli annos vixenos in disciplina permanent, &c. Cæf. de Bello Gall. L. vi.

That this is ancient enough to have been the verse used by the Druids, is manifest from there being some traditional remains of it at this day, in Wales, Cornwall and Scotland; though it be immemorial when any such were last made. And that it really was used by them seems also highly probable, as a great number of the Welsh Englyns of this sort have always some doctrine, divine or moral, in the conclusion; the rest being often insignificant, and serving only as metre thereunto. And of this kind are those very ancient Epigrams called Englynion yr eiry: as,

Eiry mynydh, guyn pôb tÿ;
Kynnevin brân a xany:
Ni dbâw dâ o dra xysÿ (a).
Eiry mynydh, guynt æ taul,
Lhydan lhoorgan, glâs tavaul;
Odid dyn diried, dihaul (b).
Eiry mÿnydh hÿdh ym mrôn;
Goſuiban guynt yux blaen òn:
Trydydh troed y bân y fôn (c).

Of the same sort are those called Eÿlÿnion ÿ klÿued, ÿ Bÿdiae, ÿ Goruÿnion, and some others, though there be also elegies and historical memoirs, such as Eÿlÿnion ÿ bedhæ, &c. in the same verse.

 REDRUTH, Dre-druith, the Druid's town, which it undoubtedly signifies, from it's vicinity to Carn Brea, that celebrated station of druidical superstition, where at this time are to be seen a multifarious collection of monumental druidism. Redruth, Ryd-ryth, is also the red ford; but that cannot be the name of the town, as there are deeds in the possession of Sir Francis Basset, bart. where it is denominated Dredruith; this name is so very ancient as to be given to the situation of the town before this kingdom was divided into parishes; as old writings express thus, "in the parish of Uny (St. Uny) juxta Dredruith."—In fine, though the parish is now, and has been immemorially called Redruth, its real dedicatory name is St. Uny; and therefore (if I mistake not) the town claims an evident antiquity prior to any other in the county.

 What ought to be their play,
 And study well,
 What did father, and mother?
 They should not go to the wood,
 To gather their meat;
 But, with little labour,
 They would get their meat, and cloaths.
 Speak to me,
 Thou man so wise,
 To whom is much of wealth, and much land;
 And I did hear the people complain,
 That there is to thee a huge wife good:
 She knows to make cloth good with her wool;
 And she must bear it, she ought to have fire.*
*Nor ought men buy fuel by the same,
 Nor go to gather the brambles about the hedges;
 For that will be spoken about the country:*
*Better she had bought some coal;
 And that will you warm behind and before.*
And you may drink best beer, if you have malt.
*Nor ought men make houses on the sand;
 But, if you will build up against the country cold,
 You must have the biggest stones,
 And they will last against sea, and wind.*

Several LETTERS written by EDWARD LHUYD, A. M. of Jefus College, and Keeper of the Ashmolean Museum, in Oxford, to THOMAS TONKIN, Esq.

AS the following Letters mostly relate to those few remainders of the Cornish language, which Mr. Tonkin took upon him to collect; and those, which do not immediately regard them, have however many things in them containing his observations while he was in this county, &c. very well worth the perusal of the learned, it is thought they would not be unacceptable in this place, they being very proper to bear company with this Work, and in some respect a necessary appendage to it. However, this I am certain of, that nothing which comes from him can be rejected by competent judges; and therefore I hope that I need not make any apology to such, for inserting them here.—I shall add no more than that they are faithful copies of the originals, and that they were all directed to Tbo. Tonkin, Esq. at Lambrigan, in St. Piran in the Sands, where he then lived.

HONOURED SIR,

YOU will receive by the bearer, (Mr. Jones) Mr. Carew's Survey of Cornwall, together with what else I borrow'd, with my most humble thanks. I once designed to have waited on you myself long ere this; but now it so happens, that I take the South coast, and leave the North to the bearer, to copy such old inscriptions as shall occur, and to take what account he can of the geography of the parishes. I know you will be pleased to favour and assist him in your neighbourhood; but where we have no acquaintance, we find the people more suspicious and jealous (notwithstanding we have my Lord Bishop's approbation of the undertaking) than in any country we have travelled. And upon that account I beg the trouble of you, when he leaves your neighbourhood, to give him two or three letters to any of your acquaintance more eastward. Mr. Pennick not being at home, we have been strictly examined in several places; and I am told the people, notwithstanding our long continuance here, have not yet removed their jealousy. I was forced, for their satisfaction, to open your letter to Mr. Pennick, and that proving to be just such an account of me, as I had given, we were immediately dismissed.*

* Mr. Lhuyd came into the country at a time, when all the people were under a sort of panick, and in terrible apprehension of thieves and house-breakers; and travelling with his three companions (with knap-sacks on their shoulders) on foot, for the better searching for simples, viewing, and taking draughts of every thing remarkable, and for that reason prying into every hole and corner, raised a strange jealousy in people already so much alarmed: though this alarm (as it appeared afterwards) was without the least foundation, and at last discovered to be the contrivance of some designing neighbours, to get money for their assistance in this pretended danger. He was with me at Lambrigan, August the 27th, 1700. And Sir Richard Vyvyan being then out of the country, (to whom I intended to have recommended him, and who had likewise by my means some acquaintance with him in Oxford) I gave him a Letter to the late Mr. Chancellor Pennick, then residing at St. Hillory,

LETTERS OF MR. LHUYD.

The Monument at Burien, in the last edition of Camden, is somewhat erroneous, as you will find by the draught I here send you. The true reading is—Clarice la Femme Cheffrei De Bolleit Git ay: Deu de L'alme eit mercy; E ke pur le alme punt, di ior de pardun averund. Clarice the wife of Geoffrey de Bolleit lies here: God on her soul have mercy: And whoever shall pray for her soul, shall have ten days pardon. § The other inscription is on a large moor-stone in a common, called Gwn mên Screpba,† in Maddern parish. The reading is—Rialobran Cunval Fil. In British, Rhiwalburan map Kynwal; names not uncommon in our old Welsh pedigrees.—I take it to be about a thousand years standing, and do not much question but the neighbouring parish of Gulval is denominated from this Kynwal, because I found many such instances in Wales. I am,

Honoured Sir,

Your much obliged humble servant,
St. Ives, Oct. 15, 1700. Edw. Lluyd.

LETTER II.

HONOURED SIR,

I take this opportunity of returning my most humble thanks for your late kindness to my fellow traveller; who is, I suppose, by this time got safe to Oxford. For my own part, I am desirous to whereof he was Vicar, and a very worthy learned Gentleman. At Helfon, as Mr. Lluyd was poring up and down, and making many enquiries about Gentlemen's seats, &c. he (with his companions) was taken up for a thief, and carried before a Justice of the Peace; who, on opening my Letter, was very much ashamed at it, and treated him very handsomely. This the bearer, Mr. Jones, gave me a full account of, though I had heard it before from others.

§ This Monument and Inscription was amended in the new Edition of Camden, from this draught of Mr. Lluyd's.

spend two or three months in Britanny, before I return to my charge; and am here waiting for a passage, having failed getting one at Loe and Foy:—Since my coming hither, I understand your father-in-law corresponds at Morlaix, which is the port I am bound for. His letter of recommendation thither might do me a singular kindness; which if you please to request of him, I desire you would send him two or three lines, inclosed and directed to me at Mr. Swan-son's in this town, and I'll wait on him with it. Mr. Hicks of Trevitick promised me his letter to him; but it happened that when I called there, he was very much indisposed; and so I would not trouble him, altho' he offered to write nevertheless.—I desire the purport of Mr. Kemp's letter may be, to acquaint his friend of my place at Oxford, and that I am engaged in composing a Dictionary of the British Language; and that this is the main reason of my journey into that country, in regard the British of Wales and Cornwall, and that of their country, are but so many dialects of one and the same language: Requesting his favour therefore, in getting me recommended to some scholar well acquainted with the British language, and antiquities; and then I hope to shift for myself.—I have already letters to two Abbots; the one from Dr. Lisler, and the other from Mr. Moyle; but these live at Paris, and I am as yet unprovided for Bretagne.*

* Being then at Pennryn myself, I got an ample recommendation for him, both for Morlaix and Nantes: which was of singular service to him. For, as in Cornwall he was taken up for a thief, so at Brest he was apprehended for a spy by the Intendant there: and after a short confinement,

I had

I had lately a letter from our old friend, Mr. Tanner,[†] with the inclosed in it; upon presumption, I suppose, that I had not waited on you since my coming to the country. He has been searching all the libraries and studies of note in England, for materials towards his edition of Leland de Scriptoribus Brit. He tells me Mr. Gibson[‡] is upon his year of grace, having got a good living in Essex. Mr. Maundril (he says) has a Treatise in the press, containing some account of his travels: This gentleman is Fellow of Exeter, and Chaplain to the factory of Aleppo. He adds, that Dr. Hicks's Saxon and Francic Grammar is above half done; and that it will contain 200 sheets in folio, being rather a Treasures of Northern Learning, than a Grammar.

I here trouble you with the oldest inscriptions we have met with, additional to the two I formerly sent you. The first Figure is of a Cross, by the almshouse at St. Blassey; but the inscription I do not at all understand.* The second is the Half-stone, which doubtless must be read as Mr. Camden hath it, tho' his letters are erroneous.† The third set at last at liberty by means of these Letters; though he did not think fit to tarry there any longer after such usage, which he has just hinted at in the next Letter. This proved however, a great disappointment to him, as well as to all posterity; since it hindered him from making such observations in the Language, Antiquities, &c. of that principality, which few men besides himself were capable of; and fewer I doubt will take such pains about, as this most curious and indefatigable Antiquary did upon every thing which he undertook.

† Afterwards Bishop of St. Asaph.

‡ Since Bishop of London, and Editor of Camden's Britannia.

* I have endeavoured, by some other help, to explain this Inscription, which you will find, and the draught of it likewise inserted in the new Edition of Camden.

was once the tomb-stone of a Briton, whose name was Kynadav'ap Icbdinow, but is now a foot bridge at Gulval near Penzans. The fourth is the tomb-stone of another Briton, which is known by the name of The Long-Stone, within a mile of Foy, (this is probably of the fifth or sixth century) his name in British was Kiris ap Kynvor; and in all probability, Polkiris, within half a mile of the stone, is denominated from him.—The fifth and sixth Figures are two Iron Plates of that form and size whereof several horse-loads were found about six years since.—Quere. Whether these may not be the British money mentioned by Cæsar, in these words,—Nummo utuntur parvo & areo, aut ferreis laminis pro nummo.† Fearing to lose the opportunity of sending this, I add no more than that I am, &c.

HONOURED SIR,

I take this opportunity (which I must confess is a very late one) of begging your pardon for not writing to you, neither out of France, nor since my re-

* I am now inclined to believe that this was, as Mr. Lhuyd seems to think, the British money mentioned by Cæsar; though once I had a doubt of it, and writ so to him in answer: for in all the Editions of Cæsar's Commentaries, which I have seen, except in the Notes of Hottomanus (who reads it—aut laminis ferreis, and this would agree exactly with these figures) Cæsar's words are—Utuntur aut areo, aut Taleis ad certum pondus examinatis pro nummo.—Now we generally translate—Taleis ferreis—Rings of iron; but though these are pierced in the middle, they will scarce come under that denomination: yet as several authors do translate this passage brass plates, and iron rings, and that 'tis reasonable to imagine that they might as well be iron plates too, (since I cannot find the word—Taleis—any where else made use of in any sense applicable to this) I believe it as reasonable to translate it here iron plates too; and cannot imagine to what other use these here found could be put.

LETTERS OF MR. LHUYD.

turn; which, as you have heard I suppose long since, was five or six weeks after landing; whereas, when I went thither, I proposed not to return in seven or eight months. I am very sensible, and shall always continue so, of your singular civility, both in Cornwall, and in procuring and giving us letters of recommendation thither; where we found a kind reception from all we conversed with, excepting the Intendant of Brest; who, having a little before received a check from Court for some negligence, was pleased, by the way of making amends, to exercise his double diligence on me, and several other English then in this neighbourhood.

Sir, Mr. Ankerstein, the gentleman that brings you this, is come into England, purely to improve his experience as to mines; and having been already at the (reputed) silver mines of Cardiganshire, he comes now to see your tin works of Cornwall. His father and himself (as I take it) have some considerable places in the King of Sweden's copper works: and in order the better to qualify himself, he has already seen most of the celebrated mines of Europe. Finding, by experience, that strangers, when they come to the remote parts of any country, are often suspected, at least by the common people, I have presumed to recommend him to your favour, as a very honest gentleman; and very knowing in that study he has applied himself to: which is all at present from,

Worthy Sir,

LETTER IV.

HONOURED SIR,

It was but three days since that Mr. Thomson shewed me your letter about the Cornish MSS. &c. Those two I formerly gave him an account of, are all the books here in that language.—One of them (which is the more valuable) is a small folio, written on parchment, in a court hand, about 200 years since. This has formerly been copied, and Mr. Anstis has (I suppose) the only copy that ever was taken from it. Having compared Mr. Anstis's copy (which he was pleased to lend me) with the original, I find it has several small errata. The Bishop (Sir Jonat. Trelawney) was pleased to communicate to me Mr. Keigwyn's translation, and transcript of Mr. Anstis's copy, which I have also transcribed for my own use; but comparing this book of Mr. Keigwyn's with the Bodley original, I find the old gentleman did not always keep to his text, but varied sometimes as he could make sense. 'Tis therefore, as you truly conclude, the best course to transcribe from the originals.—Mr. Thomson tells me he can get the Taberders to transcribe by turns: and one Griffith of our College (who has transcribed mine, and is well acquainted with the hand, and partly understands the language) offers his service to copy both, at six-pence a sheet; so be pleased to write to either of us your orders, and they shall be observed. This book consists of three plays; and the other which is on paper, written about 100 years since by one W. Jordan, contains I think but one. If you are for Mr. Keigwyn's translation, translation, it shall be also transcribed; but I must acquaint Mr. Anstis with it: or if you would have the Englisch in a book apart, with the same figures, number of lines in a page that the Cornish hath, &c. it may be done without mentioning, though for ought I know, you and Mr. Anstis are intimate friends.—Four-pence a sheet will be enough for transcribing the Englisch, but the Cornish you know will be twice as tedious.

LETTERS OF MR. LHUYD.

Sir, I am sorry the Swedish gentleman neglected to leave my letter behind him, wherein I begged your pardon (as I now heartily do) for not returning my thanks at our coming from France. My Cornish verses have I doubt so many Wallicisms, that they are not worth your enquiring after. I sent the printed copy by the Swede to Mr. Moor; and 'twas left with his widow: and it had been sent them before in writing, with a translation of them. Those few things that occurred to me in Cornwall, which are chiefly Inscriptions, and a Vocabulary as copious as I can make it, I design to insert (God willing) in my Archæologia Britannica; which I hope to print some time this next summer. I am, &c.

Oxford, Feb. 8, 1702-3.

Edw. Lhuyd.

P. S. The parchment MS. consists of 41 leaves, and was given to the Bodleian Library by one James Button of Worcestershire, Esq. anno 1615. I am heartily glad to find you curious (amongst your other studies) in your own country language and antiquities; and must recommend to you the taking in of the Armorick antiquities and language, which will much illustrate your own.

LETTER V.

HONoured SIR,

The Cornish Verses (since you must have them) are here sent you; though they are not worth the trouble of reading, much less the sending so far. I aimed at imitating the Book Cornish, rather than the Cornish now spoken; for, as you'll find when you receive your manuscripts, it has been much corrupted this last age or two. Mr. Thomson tells me you were pleased to acquaint him in one of your letters, that you have an old man in your neighbourhood, that understands the present Cornish; if so, I should be glad of any such riddles, or rhimes, you can pick up from him, as also to know how much he understands of these of mine.

This sort of verse was, for what I can yet find, the oldest, if not the only verse amongst the ancient Britons: for 'tis the oldest in our Welsh books, and I have heard an old fellow repeat one of them in the Higblands of Scotland; and had another from the Clerk of St. Just, viz.

An lavar koth yw lavar gwîr,
Na boz nevra dôz vâz an tavaz re hîr;
Bez dên heb davaz a gollaz i dîr.*

*The old saying is a true saying,
A tongue too long never did good:
But he that had no tongue, lost his land.*

Amongst our old British Elegies, whereof a good number are still preserved in parchment MSS. (though I was refused access to the two studies, where they chiefly are) I find one on Gereint ab Erbyn in the same kind of verse, which I design to print with some others in my Archæologia. This Gereint ab Erbyn, according to our account, was a Prince of your country, and co-

* Mr. Lhuyd has published it somewhat differently in his Cornish Grammar.

temporary with King Arthur: and I observed that you have places called yet Gerens, and Trev Erbyn, denominated for ought we know from this Gereint, and his Father. The Elegy celebrates his valour at the battle of Llongborth, where he was slain. Camden tells us London was called Longport, by an old British bard; but I am apt to think the place meant here, must have been somewhere in the West.†

Mr. Thomson has already got Jordan's MS. copied for you, by the Taberders; which being a late plain hand, they have done I hope well enough: but he did not design to set them upon the other, because it is a large task, and an old court hand; so I'll put either Griffith, or Parry, about that, and the other writings, as you desire. Be pleased in your next to inform us, whether you would have Keigwyn's English translation written on the opposite pages, or these pages left blank for your own Latin or English translation hereafter; and have Keigwyn's translation by itself. The reason I propose this is, because Keigwyn's English makes the Cornish poems appear very ridiculous to strangers; in regard he has been scrupulous in placing his English words according to the Cornish, throughout all his work. Be pleased to favour us with two lines at your first leisure, and it shall be done as you order; and sent you as you shall direct, either in loose sheets, or bound.

† Probably it might be Langport in Somersetshire: for in that county we meet with several footteps of King Arthur. He is said to have had his palace at Camalet; to have fought several battles, particularly the great one at Badon hill; and to have been buried at Glastenbury: all in that county.

The subscriptions I took were towards my travels, which are now over. I have had but few subscribers; but all I have, excepting some few of our country (who were brought in by example) are gentlemen of learning, and curiosity. All the return I can make them, will be copies of what I shall print, and the mentioning in the title page, that 'twas done at their command and expences, &c. with a catalogue of the subscribers, and the book dedicated to them in general. They have subscribed according to their quality, some more, some less, from twenty to fifty shillings; but some only have made punctual payments. I have only four from Cornwall, viz. my Lord Bishop, Sir Joseph Tredenham, Mr. Moyle, and Mr. Hicks, of Trevithig. Mr. John Tredenham has also subscribed, but amongst our countrymen. I would by no means put you to unnecessary charges; but if it be your pleasure, let the sum before hand be as small as you please, and 'twill be gratefully accepted by, &c.

I know not whether I mentioned in my former letter, that I had sent Mr. Moor a copy of an old Cornish Glossary, which Will. Jones met with in the Cotton Library.† Be pleased to get some friend to procure it of his executor, if possible; for it is a valuable curiosity; the Cotton MS. being probably six or seven hundred years old. If you cannot procure it, you shall have a copy of mine: whether you will alphabetically, or in the order of the Cotton MS. which is in continued lines, but with some regard to natural order. I recommend to you by all means the improving your acquaintance with Mr. Anstis, who is, I believe, the best acquainted of any man living with the Offices and Libraries about London; and a very hearty good friend as may be. I have formerly heard my Lord of Exeter say, he hoped he would undertake some kind of History of Cornwall; but I presume he is full of business. — I have lately had a loss of poor Will. Jones, whom you are pleased

That Mr. Anstis found it there, and communicated it to him: but as both might find it there much about the same time, I suppose he thought it sufficient to mention Mr. Anstis only; Jones being at that time Mr. Lhuyd.

LETTER VI.

HONOURED SIR,

Your Cornish MS. is at last transcribed; and your copy is the only true one that I presume was ever taken; for Mr. Anstis's transcriber, being wholly a stranger to the language and the hand, has committed innumerable mistakes, and then never collated it with the original, which Mr. Griffith has done; but his hand is not so good as could be wished, though legible enough. Mr. Keigwyn finding it erroneous, transcribed it himself, so as to make his sense of it; but neither of them agree with the original: so I believe Mr. Keigwyn must sometimes have mistaken his author. — The English is not yet all written, but will be finished about a fortnight hence. The writing of the English and Cornish, at the rate I mentioned (which I think enough, and not too much) comes to thirty shillings; for the note I had taken of the size of the book, proved a mistake, it being much larger.

You

You need not at all despair of learning the sense of the Cornish names of places: but for the better avoiding mistakes therein, I recommend to you the making a catalogue of all the Christian names you find in the oldest Cornish pedigrees, if you have any very ancient; if not, you may be supplied out of our Welsh books. But as for that part, if you please at your leisure to send me a catalogue of such names, as you are desirous should be interpreted, (out of deeds, or other ancient records) I can promise you a translation of many of them, without the least straining: for most of our British names of places, are as intelligible to us, as any other part of our language. And for such as appear obscure, I shall take care to distinguish the doubt, or leave them alone.—Almost every word that follows—Tre—is a man's name, once proprietor of the place; which not being adverted to by Mr. Carew, and others, has put them on several mistakes. †

The word—Pol—signifies not, a bead, in Cornish, or any other dialect of the † Mr. Lhuyd is mistaken in this (as I writ him in answer to this letter, and he seemed afterwards to acknowledge) hardly one of the names following—Tre—is taken from that of the former proprietor: but plainly from the situation, and circumstantial qualities of the place. As for example, Trenance, a town on a level, or flat piece of ground; Tre-rose, a town in a valley between, or near, hills; Tre-morgye, a town on a river, or rivulet of water; Tre-nawith, the new town; Tre-hanz, the old town; Tre-wartha, the higher town; Tre-wella, the lower, or under town, &c. Nay even Tre-rise, which bids fairest of any, to warrant his assertion, and to bear the meaning of Rise's Town (a name very common in Wales) doth however signify (as Mr. Carew has truly interpreted it) a town on a flecting ground, being anciently written Tre-rees, as I can prove from some very old deeds in my custody—which word Rees is still used by the old Cornish for a flecting, or rushing away; and in common discourse, we say the corn reeses, when it is so ripe as to fall out of the ear, without threshing.

British; but, a pit, or hole, and, sometimes, a pool. ||

I have just now given your service to Mr. Tanner, who is married to the Bishop of Norwich's daughter, and is Chancellor of that diocese.

As you have leisure and opportunity, I would desire you to collect and procure all the variety you can hear of, of the tin ores: for though I thought I was tolerably well furnished, yet I find by the Swede, who was last winter in your county, that I have but a poor collection. I am in no haste at all for them; but willing to make use of all occasions of improving my collection of English fossils, since the Museum is so proper a place to reposit them in. We met with no fossil shells, or other marine bodies in Cornwall; but if you should hear of any, they would be no less acceptable to,

Your humble servant,

Oxford, May 4, 1703.

Edw. Lhuyd.

|| Mr. Gwavas is of the same opinion with Mr. Lhuyd, that Pol does constantly signify a pit, pool, mire, &c. But that it doth sometimes too signify the top or summit of any thing, is fully proved—as for example, Pol-hendra, the top of Hendra; Pol-gover, the top or head of the rivulet; Pol-vellan, the top of the mill, &c. Nay, Mr. Lhuyd himself, in his Archæologia, p. 104, vol. 3. renders Occipitum, the the hinder part of the head; by Pol kil, which will, or can bear no other interpretation than, the top of the neck. In the old parchment Cornish MS. this word Pol is twice put to signify the head; and since our English word Poll, is by many derived from the Greek, Πόλις, the head, and there is a manifest agreement between the Greek and British in many words, I see no reason why it may not be derived from our British—Pol—as well. Not but that it doth often signify a pit, hole, pool, or mire; but then I would have it written (as 'tis generally pronounced) Pal; as, Pulllean, a tin pit; Pal Dyse, St. Dy's pits; Pal Gooch, the old pits, &c. Pul-rose, the pool under the wheel of a mill; Tresimpul, the town in the mire; Tutwele, the miry work, &c. But the situation of places ought to be considered, and that to determine the true signification, without which it is impossible to be ever right.

LETTERS OF MR. LHUYD.

LETTER VII.

HONOURED SIR,

I received the former of your's, of June the 10th, and thought then to have had the MSS. ready to be sent you by this time. The copies of the two Cornish books have been ready since the time mentioned in my last, but it falls out, that my own copy of Jordan is lost: so that we cannot add the English here; but that you may as well get done in the country, where there are several copies of it. As for the old MS. (or Ordinale) I find that Keigwyn, when he transcribed it, altered it as he pleased where he did not like it, or understand it, and then translated it: on which account his translation does but sometimes agree with the old copy. I have therefore ordered it to be written by itself; and so the alternate pages are left vacant, where perhaps you may in time insert a Latin translation of your own. I shall send the two Cornish MSS. the first opportunity, which I hope will be soon: perhaps by Mr. Paget of Truro, if he be not already set out. The English of the Ordinalia is not yet finished; the person first employed having left us on a sudden: when 'tis all writ, which will be about a month hence, I'll take care to send it the first occasion; and as for all charges, 'twill be but just what I mentioned in my last.

Sir, I make bold to trouble you with a paper of proposals, towards the printing the first Volume of my Archæologia Britannica, which I desire you to communicate to such friends, as you shall guess likeliest to further this design; and in case any shall subscribe, to return their names, some time before the 10th of September, to, &c.

Oxford, July 26, 1703.

Ewd. Lhuyd.

Mr. Thomson gives you his most humble service. One Mr. Moor comes down shortly to your county, to collect plants, insects, &c. He was recommended to me by our friend Mr. Tanner, and I have made bold to give him a letter to yourself, and another to Mr. Moyle.

LETTER VIII.

HONOURED SIR,

The manuscripts had been sent by Mr. Paget, but upon enquiry, one of Pembroke College told me he was gone out of town, which, as I guess by your's, was a mistake. I have, since my last, met with Keigwyn's translation of Jordan's play, which I then told you I had lost; and Mr. Thomson has got it transcribed for you, and will send it you the first conveniency. The translation of the old plays is writ out: but I must desire to keep these old plays, and their translation, a little longer, because it is a much truer copy than mine, and I am now upon the Cornish Vocabulary promised in the proposals. I thank you for your own subscription, and the other two gentlemen's you mention: I was sensible the subjects were too singular to have many subscribers; however, I hope to have a good number yet out of your county, seeing the Bishop of Carlisle has returned twenty out of Cumberland.

Our latest news here is the death of Dr. Wallis, who is succeeded in the place

LETTERS OF MR. LHUYD.

place of keeper of the Archives, by Dr. Gardiner, the Warden of All-Souls: and 'tis discoursed, the place of Savilian Professor will be offered to Mr. Hally. Dr. Hicks's Thesaurus Linguarum Septentrionalium, will be published about the Christmas holy-days. I am in no haste for the ores; so I desire you would keep them, till you have what variety you suppose the country may afford: and then send them by water to London, directed to be left with Mr. Griffith Davies, next door to the Golden Ball, in Monmouth-street, St. Giles in the Fields, and he'll take care to send them to, &c.

Oxford, Dec. 8, 1703.

Edw. Lhuyd.

LETTER IX.

HONOURED SIR,

The reason I did not sooner return my most humble thanks for your generous contribution, was because Mr. Thomson and I could not agree on a time, for the consumption of the remainder of the five pounds (which was seven shillings) according to your orders. We have now lately drank your health, together with Mr. Thwaites, and one or two more of the fellows of Queen's. The transcript of Dooms-Day Book, as also of the Taxatio Beneficiorum Angliæ, 20 Edw. I. has been done ever since your first orders, being but a small business. The old Cornish Glossary is also copied a month since; and I have now done with the old plays I desired the use of in my last: so that I only wait for your orders how I shall send them, whether by the Devonshire carrier? and if so, where they shall be left for you? the Cornish MS. in the Publick Library,

Arch. B. 31. is only Wm. Jordan's play, which is one of the books transcribed for you; but there is not a word therein of the glass-windows of St. Neot's: so that Mr. Gibson (or whoever sent him that note) must mean, that the customs of the Jews are well described in that MS. which if omitted had been no great loss to the reader.† I am, &c.

Oxford, March 3, 1703-4. Edw. Lhuyd.

* * * * *

Between this, and the next letter, is a vacancy of no less than four years: having, on the death of the Queen, been hurried away to London, and some other troubles following it, these (amongst many other letters) were destroyed in my absence; and the three following ones preserved from the fate of the rest, I cannot well tell how.—

TONKIN.

LETTER X.

HONOURED SIR,

I ordered the books (Archæologia Britannica) to be sent from London, according to your directions, to Mr. Bishop of Exeter, and I hope you have long since received them. The reason I did

† In a letter to Mr. Lhuyd, to which this is an answer, I had mentioned these words of Dr. Gibson, in the additions to Camden in Cornwall, speaking of St. Neot's church—"In the windows are several pictures relating to some particular traditions of the Jews; which are exactly delivered in a Cornish book, now in the public Library at Oxford. Arch. B. 31."—From whence I concluded that this must be some other book, describing the paintings in St. Neot's church windows: not dreaming that he meant this play of Jordan, and that the traditions of the Jews were exactly delivered in that; which, whoever can meet with in that play, must be a greater conjurer than I pretend to be. Not that I blame the Bishop of London, but the person that sent him this information. Two or three of such traditions perhaps may be met with there, as the killing of Cain by Lamech, &c. which are scarce worth the taking notice of.

LETTERS OF MR. LHUYD.

not write sooner was, because I have thus long waited for an answer about the family of Carn, from a Glamorganshire Herald; who has at last sent me the following account out of his manuscript of the Glamorgan families, &c.

Sir Edward Carn, ambassador to Rome for Queen Mary, was a younger son of Howel Carn's, son of John Carn, 'ab Howel Carn, 'ab John Carn, 'ab Thomas, 'ab Sir John Carn, 'ab William, 'ab Thomas, 'ab Charles, 'ab Sir Devereux, (alias Kywras) 'ab Thomas, second son of Itbel Brenin Gwent. The word Brenin is used at present for King; but 'twas formerly, a tributary Prince, and many of them had but small territories: for in our annals we often find mention of Brenin Pegeizt, i. e. Flintshire; Brenin Dived, by which is meant Pembrokeshire; Brenin Karedigion, or King of Cardiganshire, &c. As for the country of Gwent, 'twas only that part of the old Morgannug, called now Monmouthshire. For though Morgannug be at present used only for Glamorganshire, yet it signified anciently the countries we call now Monmouth and Glamorgan; as appears by the red book of Hergerst. Itbel King of Gwent was (according to George Owen Harry) the son of Ivor, 'ab Howel, 'ab Kradock, 'ab Jeflin, 'ab Gurgent, Lord of Morgannug, in the time of William Rufus. The said Gurgent (according to an old manuscript I met with at Gwidir, in North-Wales) was the son of Itbel, 'ab Kadualon, 'ab Gurgant, 'ab Artmor, 'ab Owen, 'ab Howel, 'ab Rys, 'ab Artvael, 'ab Rys, 'ab Itbel, 'ab Morgan, 'ab Artnes, 'ab Meurig, 'ab Teudrig, 'ab Pettie, 'ab Ninian, 'ab Irb, 'ab Erbig, 'ab Nimmis,

'ab Beli Maur, the father of Kassualon, or Cassibellanus, the British General against Julius Cæsar. Itbel, King of Gwent's eldest son, was Meirick, whose daughter Morwidth, was married to Gronu 'ab Ednived Vixan. This Gronu was father to Tydyr, father to Gronu, father to Tydyr, father to Meredydb, father to Owen Tydyr, (for his name was Owen 'ab Meredydb 'ab Tydyr) grandfather to King Henry the VIIth. Itbyn in Ant. Wood, must needs be an error of the press for Itbel, there being no such name as the former ever used by the Britons.

The same friend (whose name is Mr. Philip Williams, of Diffryn near Neath) acquaints me, that one of the said Itbel, Prince of Gwent's seats, was called Pen-Karn, whence the name of Karn: and if Le was ever prefixed to it, 'twas done in imitation of the Normans, among whom they lived. The word Karn, Kairn, or Karned, signifies a heap of stones, and there are hundreds of places so named in Wales, Scotland, and Ireland: there are not a few in Cornwall likewise. A continuance of your obliging correspondence, would always be esteemed as one of the greatest happiness of the remainder of his days, by, &c.

Oxford, March 7, 1707-8. Edw. Lhuyd.

LETTER XI.

HONOURED SIR,

This hopes to find you in perfect health and prosperity, though not so much at leisure for correspondence as formerly. The four books were sent immediately to be left with Mr. Philip Bishop, bookseller, at Exeter: (I received

soon

soon after three of them, and no more.) But having not received any letter from you since, I begin to question whether he took care to forward them, as you then acquainted me you had writ to him. Meeting lately with a Cardiganshire pedigree book, I took notice that the Carns, of Glamorganshire, were descended likewise, according to that copy, from Tnir, Prince of Gwent, or as now called, Monmouthshire. I know not whether I told you in my last, that Tnir, Enir, and Henir, is the same name with the Roman Honorius; and was so written sometimes in our old Latin MSS. I hope your friend, if living, has by this time finished his Cornish Latimar; which was what I hinted at in the English preface. It is a thing I would much rejoice to see, either in manuscript, or print. You were pleased several years since to acquaint me, that you had got together a considerable collection of ores, stones, &c. which I should be very glad, at your leisure, to hear some further news of—This place affords but little worth sending. Exeter College flourishes so well, that they are about another building, having received as I am told a thousand pounds from the Lord Primate. Mr. Thwaites of Queen's, you have heard, I suppose, is our Greek Professor; and has had lately a grant of that 100l. per annum, which of late years, was usually conferred on the Proctors. I am, &c.

Oxford, Sept. 1, 1708.

Edw. Lhuyd.

LETTER XII.

HONOURED SIR,

You may be always assured, that whenever your letters come to my hands, I am as glad to see them as any I ever receive. That of October the 28th had the misfortune to come a little too late to London, to find Mr. Pugh there; whence (after a considerable delay, I suppose) it was sent into North Wales, and from thence it came to my hands just now.—I was here when the books were sent from London, and gave orders for four books; but whether my man, who is also now here, blundered, I cannot say.—I am very glad the Cornish Latimar goes on, however; and should be very glad of a copy of one letter, or else of two sheets, for specimen. He ought to exemplify all the uncommon words, or at least all that are not common, in those few Cornish writings remaining; and also now and then to confirm and illustrate their signification, by the help of our dialect.—If the specimen be inclosed for me to the Honourable Sir Jeffery Jefferys, M. P. at his house in St. Mary Axe, London, it will save postage; and in regard he lives generally in London, if you please to direct your's so hereafter, they will be likelier to come in due time. When you favour me with your next letter, I should be glad to know whether old Keigwyn be yet living; and if so, whether either he himself, or your neighbour, can make a shift to understand the preface to the Cornish Grammar. There are some words in it, I own, that I have not read in the Cornish, and were therefore borrowed out of the Welsh, but they are very few; and if they please to send me a catalogue of all that are not understood, I will readily explain them.—I am encouraged raged to stand for the place of Divinity Beadle, which is represented to be somewhat better than 100l. per annum.—If yourself or friends could favour me with a speedy recommendation to Mr. Verman, it might perhaps prove very serviceable to,

Your's, &c.

Oxford, Dec. 22, 1708. Edw. Lhuyd.

P. S. If any one write to Mr. Verman, I would gladly deliver it myself.

.....

I procured a letter from a friend to Mr. Verman, of Exeter College, as desired; but what success it had, or whether Mr. Lhuyd did get the place, I cannot tell.—

I likewise sent him a specimen of Mr. Hals's Latimar ay Kernow of all the letter A, and part of B; to which I received an answer not at all approving of the method taken therein; which, whether I sent to Mr. Hals, or what else is become of it, I can by no means be certain of; or meet with that or any other letter from this most ingenious and learned antiquary; who died suddenly, in the best of his time, at Oxford, June the 30th, 1709; to the great regret of all that had the happiness to be acquainted with his person or writings.—(TONKIN)
